

The Scrap Book

Improving on the Author.
In "Forty Years on the Stage" the author, John H. Barnes, has this to say of Lucy Raymond, "that wonderful old woman," with whom he often played:
"If it were possible for her to be fatter than when she was speaking her lines it was when she forgot them. Her perplexity was self-evident. The first night of H. J. Byron's 'Our Soldiers' she had to say to Miss Kate Bishop: 'Shakespeare says, "What's in a name?" I say everything.' Under these her mind wandered temporarily, and she said, haltingly and apologetically: 'Somebody says: "Who is it? Is it Chaucer or Sir Benjamin Johnson or Shakespeare or some of those old gentlemen you see in Westminster abbey? What's in a name?"'
"Byron, who was standing by, shook with laughter and immediately said: 'Well, I can't write anything as funny as that. I'll put that in.' And it will be found incorporated in the printed book of the play as sold today."

Sierra Pan.
I am here and dew and sunbeams;
I am mist on the rocky ways;
I'm the rippling note of the field lark's throat;
I'm the jewel hid in the cave.

I'm the lightning flash on the mountain
And the cold red soil of the dawn;
I'm the odor of pine and the purple vine;
I'm the willow leaf of the fawn.

I'm the sigh of the south wind of autumn,
The scent of the earth at first rain,
The wild honker call of the earliest fall;
I'm the yellow of ripening grain.

I'm the mist no singer has dreamed of;
I'm the picture from no poet's art;
I'm the rhythmic time of no poet's time;
I'm joy in the human heart.

In Perfect Accord.
Some years ago there came to an American city a delightful German, Herr von Blitz, who intended to support himself by giving lessons in his native tongue. When he had been here several months and had secured a moderate number of pupils he one day to the mother of one of them and to her great surprise, asked for her daughter's hand in marriage.

"But, my dear sir," said she, "my daughter has no fortune."
The suitor smiled upon her in an expansive generosity.

"Me, too," said he reassuringly.
"And, although we are not rich, we have this far been able to give her every comfort. She is indeed used to luxury."

"Me, too," was the smiling rejoinder.
"But, Herr von Blitz, she will never be able to manage affairs."
"Me, too," rejoined the lover.

"And I feel obliged to tell you that my daughter has a very high temper."
"Me, too—me, too."
That was enough. The mother retired from the contest, and the professor won his suit.

Took the Hint.
Once, when G. K. Chesterton was at a dinner party, the hostess did not give the usual signal for the ladies to retire at the end of the meal so that the men could enjoy their wine and cigars, as is the custom. "G. K. C.'s" brilliant conversation seemed to have glued the fair diners to their seats.

Presently one of the ladies pointed to one of the candles on the table and exclaimed: "Oh, look at that wretched candle! How it's smoking!"
Chesterton turned to her with a sigh. "Lucky candle," he said enviously.

The hostess took the hint at once and smilingly rose and quitted the room with the other ladies, leaving the famous writer and the rest of the male guests free to enjoy "My Lady Nicotine" in peace.

Sticking to the Track.
As former Congressman Martin Littleton tells the tale, a railroad was built through an obscure corner of a state where no railroads ever had the hardihood to venture before. On the day the first train ran over the line the engineer, pulling out from a small way station, discovered that a country boy was riding a horse between the rails a short distance ahead.

The engineer sounded his whistle again and again, but the rider only lashed his horse into a gallop and made no effort to turn off into the farm-lands which flanked the right of way. At the end of a mile long chase the locomotive was so close upon the laboring horse that the cowcatcher almost touched its hind hoof. The pestered engineer leaped out of his cab window.

"You blamed idiot!" he yelled. "Why don't you get off the track?"
Over his shoulder the frightened yodel hung back a desperate rider: "Now, sir! If ever you get me out yonder on that there plover ground you could teach me in a minute!"—Saturday Evening Post.

The Top Hat's Tyranny.
Speaking about the top hat, an amusing incident of its tyranny may be recalled. At an international exhibition held at Milan a few years ago the order was given that the wearing of the chimney pot would be rigidly enforced at the inaugural ceremony. Many provincial deputies had never worn one in their lives and were a little uncertain as to the scope of the order. When they turned up it was found that some of them had not only bought top hats for themselves, but also for their wives.—London Chronicle.

Something Saved.
"What success did you have raising chickens?"
"Very little. Some escaped, thieves stole others and a large number died of a mysterious disease."
"That was tough luck."
"However, I beat the jinx to the last one."
"How was that?"
"Before anything could happen to it I had it killed and put to a pie."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Curiosity.
Glady's—Why are you going to all that trouble to open that letter so carefully, Maud? Maud—Oh, I had a quarrel with George and intended to send his letter back unopened, but I just thought I would see what he said before I returned it.

Never.
Mr. Willis—But why don't you take your bank book in to have it balanced?
Mrs. Willis—I don't want that snooty looking cashier to know how much money I've got in there.—Pittsburgh Press.

FLEETEST OF ALL DOGS.

Greyhounds Can Run as Fast as Carrier Pigeons Can Fly.
Comparatively few people realize of what remarkable speed dogs are capable. The wolf can run between fifty and sixty miles in one night, and the Arctic fox can do quite as well, if not better. Nansen met one of these foxes on the ice at a point more than seventy miles northwest of the Bannock territory, which is 480 miles from the Asiatic coast. Eskimo and Siberian dogs can travel forty-five miles on the ice in five hours, and there is one case on record in which a team of Eskimo dogs traveled six and one-half miles in twenty-eight minutes.
English setters and pointers hunt at the rate of eighteen to nineteen miles an hour, and they can maintain the pace for at least two hours. Foxhounds are extraordinarily swift, as is proved by the fact that a dog of this breed once beat a thoroughbred horse, covering four miles in six and one-half minutes. Greyhounds are the swiftest of all four-footed creatures, and their speed may be regarded as equal to that of carrier pigeons. English greyhounds which are carefully selected and which are used for covering are able to cover at full gallop three yards every second. It is said that a hare at its greatest speed never goes faster than at the rate of eight feet per second. These interesting statistics fully prove the right of the greyhounds to rank as the swiftest of the quadrupeds.—Springfield Republican.

VIOLENT DEATHS.

One indication is the immediate setting in of Rigor Mortis.
More than once the question of whether a person has died a natural or unnatural death turns upon something grasped in the hand. The object is held because the hand stiffens through what is known as rigor mortis (pronounced rye-gor mor-tis), a stiffening of the muscles of the body after death.

Now, if a person dies naturally this stiffening of the muscles does not take place in the hand, and two hours or more after death, and then it comes on slowly. In cases of violent death, however, rigor mortis sets in immediately. It is through this that many a murderer has been caught and many a so-called accidental death proved to be intentional.

One of the most remarkable effects of this sudden stiffening after death appears in the account of the charge of Balacava. Captain Molewa while riding at the head of the sobis six hundred and his chest torn open by a Russian shot.

The arm he was waving in the air at the moment remained high uplifted, and he retained his seat on his horse, which wheeled around and passed some distance through the ranks before the rider fell.

Portions of the hair and clothing of a murderer have often been found in the hands of the victim, while bodies recovered from the water have brought with them clutched in their fingers weeds and mud from the bottom, showing that death occurred in the water and not on land.—London Answers.

Natural Age of Man.

The question as to what is the natural age of man is by no means settled. Of course, but many are of the opinion that the Frenchman Flournois was not far out of the way in his estimate of the time a man should live. "Taking his observations from the group mammalia, of the class vertebrata, as having the closest resemblance to man and such species as are permitted to live the full term of their natural life under circumstances not admitting of error or doubt, Flournois found that their natural life extended to about five times the period of their lives from birth up to maturity. Applying the rule thus obtained to human life and taking the age at which the body is fully matured to be 100 years, he concluded the natural duration of the life of man to be 500 years."

Stoneware.
No sooner had we set foot on the first swell of plain than I became aware of what looked like a herd of elephants, half a mile ahead. They did not move, and slowly I dawned upon me that this was Stoneware. A few minutes later, seated within the circles of those enormous stones, I was asking myself the old questions that so many travelers have asked. For worship, at least, these rude masses were erected; that seems fairly certain. And to commemorate a battle, if one may judge from the barrows, that crown the neighboring hillsides. Religion and war—the two powers that have charmed and ruled and tortured the world. So mysterious is the whole of life, alike moral and physical, that the haunting wonder of Stoneware was neither increased nor lessened by what I saw.—Scribner's.

Many Species of Bananas.
The banana is a substitute for the potato would have one drawback. It has been found that those who live mainly upon this article of diet soon tend to become what is politely called "fat." The banana with which we are all familiar is only one of many useful species. Cochin China produces a single fruit that is an ample meal for three men, and in East Africa an intoxicating drink is made from the native banana.—London Chronicle.

The Reason.
"The first year of married life is always the most troublesome. After a couple passes that safely the great danger of separation is over."
"Why do you say that?"
"It usually takes a man a year to learn the fallacy of arguing with his wife."—Detroit Free Press.

Tearing Sounds.
The ear can be trained to accustom itself to the sound of the tearing of various materials. The noise accompanying the tearing of cotton is unlike that of linen. The warp has its voice and the filling quite another, the former being shrill, while the latter is apt to be dull.

Those Dear Girls.
Alice (just engaged)—What do you think Jack said to me last night? That if he had to choose either me or $10,000 he wouldn't look at the money. Marie—Dear, loyal fellow! Wouldn't it be like the temptation, I suppose.—Boston Transcript.

Too Kind.
Green—Has fortune never knocked at Brown's door? White—Oh, yes, but Brown didn't dare open it for fear 'twas a bill collector.—New York American.

The man that loves and laughs must sure do well.—Pope.

LOBSTER AND CHICKEN.

The Walter Seemed to Think the Order Fitted in Admirably.
Obviously the young man who led a girl much younger to a table in an upper restaurant a few evenings ago was a connoisseur. Both seemed just a little self-conscious and apparently very much pleased with each other's society. He was more than ordinarily solicitous to see that she was comfortably seated, and his attentions were, while gentlemanly in the extreme, marked enough to be noticeable. Both scanned the menu carefully, and finally the young girl made her selection. The young man seemed, while the waiter stood at attention, to be trying to persuade her to change her order, but she appeared to insist that her choice should stand. He decided for himself very quickly and gave the order to the attentive waiter, who both scanned the menu carefully, and finally the young girl made her selection.
