Mr. Cary says they are a real pest and that some steps should be taken toward a systematic destruction of them. When it was suggested that a move had been made looking to the government to take active charge of a wholesale poisoning crusade he said it was a good move but should be made compulsory as otherwise it would be of little benefit. One man may poison the rats on his place but they'll come from a neighbor and eat him out so the neighbor should be made to poison his rats as well.
