

HOW NEW SPIRIT OF AMERICANISM.

On a stiff grade the other day we saw a most inspiring sight. A fiver, that thought it was a truck, had stalled with a load of junk right at the peak of the pitch. The lone driver couldn't leave his wheel because his emergency brake wouldn't hold the overloaded car, so there he was holding hard on both brakes and wondering where he would finally alight.

Along came a big truck, driven by a lad with the foreign service stripes. Off he hopped and chocked a block under a wheel of the fiver.

About that time a touring car passed, with two chaps in it who had parts of soldier regalia with their cuts. They stopped.

A wood wagon drove up, and another lad, who probably had seen the inside of a transport a few times, jumped down.

So the four of them pushed the little old bus right up the hill; the engine giving an occasional puff and grunt to show it was doing its durndest.

We notice a lot more of this spirit since the boys came back.

And if selfish business imagines that it is going to capitalize this new spirit, it is mistaken.

Because for love of motherland we work 18 hours a day for 18 months, and accept the governmental stipend of a dollar a day or so as payment in full, by no means indicates that on our return we will display the same spirit of sacrifice; to boost the keen gents who remained at home and made money out of the war.

But for the fellow in a tight place, help him out regardless.

That's the new spirit of Americanism.

WHO'S WHO?

The self-determination of small peoples is to be more than a political process. It is going to be an exercise in comparative ethnology.

There are some small nations to be self-determined whose names we have only just heard of. And there are some that we haven't heard of yet.

No doubt there are folks in Harney county who have always known who the Croations are. And the Jugo-Slavs. And the Lithuanians, Bosnians, Cingalese, Koreans, etc. Most of us, probably, have a fairly distinct idea where these different people live. Some of us, perhaps don't know that. And very few of us have a precise idea of their exact political status.

It is perplexing to be confronted with the question whether a certain race is or is not a classified subdivision of a larger race. And, if so, whether it ought to be cut loose or not. And if not, why.

The Koreans have just put in a claim for self determination, and one of their reasons is that they are Christians. Some of them probably are. Their claim has a religious as well as a political basis. And it seems about as good a claim as several others that we have heard lately.

But it seems strange that we have only just heard it, and that the political side of it is kept carefully in the background. If theological convictions have been nourishing these aspirations so long, why have they been concealed till now? The inference seems to be that it is at present the fashion to claim political independence of some one or other, and the Koreans judged that it was time to get in line.

There is no question that, as long as this job of re-charting the world goes on, the more complex and diversified it will become. And it seems likely that every claim that is made has in it the seeds of another war.

PICKING THE PRESIDENT

If the 1920 presidential race develops into a dash of the water wagons, as has been predicted by the "dry" wings in the two major parties, then available material in both ranks is obtainable. Governor Henry Allen of Kansas, elected to the office while doing war work in France, stands on a dry platform in the Republican party. His nomination might develop should the Democrats' great "dry" advocate, William Jennings Bryan, stage a comeback and dominate affairs as he did in the Baltimore convention in 1912.

LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS.

The successful business man must base his life upon honor and integrity. Beyond and outside of these, he must have the compound of initiative, aggressiveness, determination, practicality and vision which America, in her love for condensation, has chosen to style "pep."

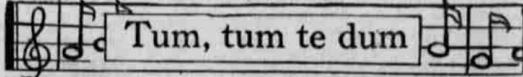

The successful wideawake and progressive town must possess the same qualities. It must have the judgment to realize that its prosperity and growth depend on the home advantages and business advantages which it can offer. And it must have vision enough to see that expenditures which secure these advantages are not an extravagance, but an asset.

Money spent in local improvements such as public buildings, schools, good roads, sewers, city water, gas and electric lights, is money well spent. Undertaking any of these improvements is like making an excellent investment, which is bound to return dividends. The gain to the town reacts to the comfort and benefit of every citizen.

Who wants to live in a town without "pep," a town which drags out a monotonous existence without growth or improvement? When the question of local improvement comes up, stand behind it, "boost" it, work for it, vote for it. Install local improvements, and you will see your town sought by business enterprises and manufacturing.

It is up to you, Mr. Citizen. Stand up for local improvements first, last and all the time, and you will help make your home town a desirable place of residence and a progressive business center.

One swallow does not make a spring—neither is a spring complete without its June bride—therefore, behold, the 1919 bride in all her peacetime splendor. The military marriage is quite past tense now and all the frills of prosperity years are in order. Here in ivory satin, the bodice and skirt covered with shadow lace and with tulle used in the upper part of the train, this maid is happy. The little flower girl in handmade frock with real lace insertion and hand embroidery at the belt, is tucked about with a blue satin sash.

W. U. SUPERVISOR STATES THE FACTS.

Brooks Says Tanlac Has Overcome His Troubles—Feels Like New Man.

"My wife obtained such satisfactory results from Tanlac that I tried it myself and I have gained ten pounds and feel like a new man," said J. W. Brooks, traffic superintendent for the Western Union Telegraph Co. at Dallas, Tex., and living at 1732 Hickory street, that city.

"When I began taking Tanlac," he continued, "I was suffering from a stubborn case of stomach trouble, the result of an attack of acute indigestion I had several years ago. I had an awful pain across my back, and was so nervous and worried about my kidneys that I could hardly sleep at all. I suffered from rheumatism in my legs, my feet would swell and I was tired and languid all the time. I was badly rundown, lost weight, strength and energy and none of the medicines I took did me any good."

"After using Tanlac for a short time I began to pick up and kept improving till now my rheumatism is all gone, the pains have disappeared from my back and my kidneys don't worry me like they did. I have a fine appetite and can eat anything I want without suffering at all from indigestion, my sleep is sound and restful and I get up in the morning feeling fine."
