Demonstrating Corn Products

Local stores are demonstrating the delicious dainties it is possible to make with Mazola oil, a corn product used wherever lard, butter or olive oil is called for in cooking. Mrs. Myrtle Bacon and her daughter, Miss Mary Foley, of Boise are the demonstrators, and are presenting callers at the different stores with samples of their culinary art.

They were at the Farmers Exchange yesterday, and can be found at the store of L. E. Reed today and part of Monday. For the remainder of that day, and all day Tuesday, the Burns Cash Store will be their headquarters. Wednesday, the last day of the demonstration, will find them with N. Brown & Sons.

The demonstrated product has been on the market for several years, and is prepared by an old established firm making a specialty of corn products. The trip to Burns is made at the request of a Boise wholesale house to acquaint local housewives with the merits of the goods, and is not a demonstrating tour.

PLAY IN YOUR OWN BACKYARD.

It is handy to be able to get a thing as soon as you need it. It is preferable to be able to do this—better, at least, than to wait a week or two, while a letter travels from you to a mail order house, goes through various offices and factory departments, and finally starts a movement from the stockroom to the shipping department, resulting in your ultimate attainment of what you wanted—if it is really what you asked for.

It is more convenient to be able to go down main street, pick it up in your hand, and say "how much?" to the clerk.

"Yes," you admit. "It would be more convenient—if he had it in stock. But has he?"

Well; that part of it is largely up to you. If a local storekeeper finds that you will come to him first, and give him a chance of showing whether he can deliver, he has a motive for getting a microscope and studying the peculiar needs and tastes of people. But nothing is more disheartening to a dealer than to do all the microscope work in vain—and to find out, after he has stocked up to the best of his judgment with what he thinks we need, that we have decided to depend on the metropolis and the mails.

Folks of Burns, we don't want to be an imitation New York, an imitation Chicago, an imitation New Orleans, Pittsburg, Cleveland, St. Louis. He who always quotes is never quoted. He who always imitates is never imitated.

Let's grow, folks of Burns. Let's be self-dependent, self-sufficient, self-supporting; and some day we'll be big enough to have others imitating us.
