That the members of the election boards appointed by the county court to serve at such election are as follows viz: For North Election Precinct: Judges: Otto L. Gasch, Chairman of election board, Albert Wood, and R. B. Allen; Clerks: John Johnston and Martin V. Buck.

That said election will be held at eight (8) o'clock in the forenoon and will continue until eight (8) o'clock in the afternoon of said 21st day of February, 1920. Dated this 14th day of January, 1920.

CHESTER DALTON

Another distressing condition has been pointed out to The Green Ribbon—re-pointed out would be more exact. It is such a little thing, too, when one stops to think of it—cracks. Sidewalk cracks. Yawning sidewalk cracks. Deep, treacherous, yawning sidewalk cracks that lessen every Burns woman's chance of going to Heaven. Cracks that have an insatiable appetite for milady's high heels. Cracks that even the deep snow can not satisfactorily fill up. Cracks that lie in wait and when the fair damocels come tripping by, turn the poetic tripping to one more real and ghastly, and rip off high heels. We must save those heels.

LEGAL NOTICES

It could be done by forbidding the ladies the privilege of wearing them. It would only mean a change in human nature, and you know how easy that is. Just as simple as making the Sphinx talk. There isn't much hope of changing the sidewalks—that is almost as easy as changing human nature. But it has been suggested to the Ribbon that all new walks be laid with lengthwise boards, instead of across, as it seems the lengthwise cracks are not so dangerous to high heels. But that might be hard on baby wagon wheels. We'll give our staple prize—a yard of Green Ribbon—to the best practical solution of this week's problem. Mail your answers early. The Unconscious Club was suddenly revived this week by the election of a brand new member. He takes this column seriously. A most important discovery has been unearthed by our zealous news-hound, the Cheerful Idiot, this week. He claims to have learned the three reasons why people talk. The first, of course, is to tell something for general information. The second, is to tell something that must not be repeated. And the last is to tell something that it is hoped will be repeated in the right place. Which comes under the head of advertising, and really ought to have first place. But the Cheerful Idiot doesn't care much about advertising—except the classified kind. He always likes to get big returns for his money, and knows the little ads pull big. It is rumored from an authoritative source that the young ladies of Burns are going on strike. Further details will be published as soon as the strike leaders give us authority. You'll get the kick of the season out of it when you learn why. "In the Spring the young man's fancy lightly turns"—an ever'-thing. And if this pesky Spring January doesn't discontinue soon, one newspaper is rosin' to be short a mighty good Green Ribbon. We long to lay in the lush grass of Ross island, down at Portland. Under a tree, but not in its shade, where the sun shines warmly, producing that lazy, I don't want to move feeling—watching the steam boats peeling up and down the Willamette, clouds of smoke pouring from their smokestacks. That's Spring. The air invites you outdoors. And as you lie flat on your back, watching the little clouds come and disappear in the blue vault above—a bug drops in your eye from the aforesaid tree, or a cinder from the last steamboat. But that's Spring! Have you got out your nominating petition yet? Lots of candidates will want electing, from the early crop indications. Vote often and early. GETTING TIRED OF IT. A business man and taxpayer is quoted in the Coos Bay Times with a complaint that truly sets forth the plight and situation of hundreds of good honest, decent business men and taxpayers of Oregon. "I am inspected, suspected, examined, re-examined, informed, required, restrained, and commanded, so that I don't know who I am, where I am, or why I am here. All that I know is that I am supposed to be an inexhaustible supply of money for every human need, desire or hope of the human race, and because I will not sell all I have and go and beg, borrow, or steal money to give away, I have been cussed, discussed, boycotted, talked to, talked about, lied to, lied about, held up, robbed, and nearly ruined; and the only reason I am clinging to life for is to see what is coming off next."

And the last is to tell something that it is hoped will be repeated in the right place. Which comes under the head of advertising, and really ought to have first place. But the Cheerful Idiot doesn't care much about advertising—except the classified kind. He always likes to get big returns for his money, and knows the little ads pull big. It is rumored from an authoritative source that the young ladies of Burns are going on strike. Further details will be published as soon as the strike leaders give us authority. You'll get the kick of the season out of it when you learn why. "In the Spring the young man's fancy lightly turns"—an ever'-thing. And if this pesky Spring January doesn't discontinue soon, one newspaper is rosin' to be short a mighty good Green Ribbon. We long to lay in the lush grass of Ross island, down at Portland. Under a tree, but not in its shade, where the sun shines warmly, producing that lazy, I don't want to move feeling—watching the steam boats peeling up and down the Willamette, clouds of smoke pouring from their smokestacks. That's Spring. The air invites you outdoors. And as you lie flat on your back, watching the little clouds come and disappear in the blue vault above—a bug drops in your eye from the aforesaid tree, or a cinder from the last steamboat. But that's Spring! Have you got out your nominating petition yet? Lots of candidates will want electing, from the early crop indications. Vote often and early. GETTING TIRED OF IT. A business man and taxpayer is quoted in the Coos Bay Times with a complaint that truly sets forth the plight and situation of hundreds of good honest, decent business men and taxpayers of Oregon. "I am inspected, suspected, examined, re-examined, informed, required, restrained, and commanded, so that I don't know who I am, where I am, or why I am here. All that I know is that I am supposed to be an inexhaustible supply of money for every human need, desire or hope of the human race, and because I will not sell all I have and go and beg, borrow, or steal money to give away, I have been cussed, discussed, boycotted, talked to, talked about, lied to, lied about, held up, robbed, and nearly ruined; and the only reason I am clinging to life for is to see what is coming off next."

It could be done by forbidding the ladies the privilege of wearing them. It would only mean a change in human nature, and you know how easy that is. Just as simple as making the Sphinx talk. There isn't much hope of changing the sidewalks—that is almost as easy as changing human nature. But it has been suggested to the Ribbon that all new walks be laid with lengthwise boards, instead of across, as it seems the lengthwise cracks are not so dangerous to high heels. But that might be hard on baby wagon wheels. We'll give our staple prize—a yard of Green Ribbon—to the best practical solution of this week's problem. Mail your answers early. The Unconscious Club was suddenly revived this week by the election of a brand new member. He takes this column seriously. A most important discovery has been unearthed by our zealous news-hound, the Cheerful Idiot, this week. He claims to have learned the three reasons why people talk. The first, of course, is to tell something for general information. The second, is to tell something that must not be repeated. And the last is to tell something that it is hoped will be repeated in the right place. Which comes under the head of advertising, and really ought to have first place. But the Cheerful Idiot doesn't care much about advertising—except the classified kind. He always likes to get big returns for his money, and knows the little ads pull big.
