

INTERESTING COLLECTION OF ARROWHEADS

Last Saturday, while enroute to Catlow in company with County Agent McDaniels and party, the writer saw a fine collection of Indian arrow heads at the home of Mrs. Jones at the Grain Camp on the Blitzen. Mrs. Jones had just returned to the house from an arrow hunting trip and had a few new specimens to add to her already fine collection. These consisted of a variety both in size and color and all were neatly arranged upon a suitable background. Mrs. Jones stated that the arrow heads were quite plentiful in that locality, stating that following each rain more are found on the same ground where formerly it would seem there were none left. This is accounted for by the rain uncovering others that have been buried in the earth.

These arrow heads are found along the margin of the big Blitzen marsh where the Indians in former days shot game with bow and arrow.

FREAK CATTLE HAS TWO TAILS

Wilbur Haines, who is one of the out of town Chautauqua visitors, informs this office that he has a Red Foll calf out at the Diamond ranch with two tails. The extra "appendage" is between the shoulders on top of the animal's back. Otherwise the calf is normal in every respect and perfectly healthy. It is now a yearling and Wilbur has been offered a big price for it but has not accepted any offer yet.

THE CAT AND THE BIRD

A short time ago a male and a female bird mated and built their nest in the forks of a tree. In time there were some little birds, just out of their shells.

In an incautious moment the female bird became food for a cat, and the little birds were left motherless, with only the father bird to feed them and mother them through the perils of infancy.

It is so with the human species. There are too many cats to prey upon the mothers of the race. It is destroying the best of humanity, weakening the race of the future.

Sometimes the cat is in the form of a thoughtless or cruel husband, driving his wife beyond the powers of endurance during her weakened state, sapping her vitality, wrecking her constitution, sending her to an early grave, and leaving the little ones to the indifferent care of a home without a mother.

Again it is ambition to excel socially, the insane longing for excitement, or an unwillingness to assume the responsibilities of motherhood. A child nursed in the cradle of indifference becomes in itself an alien to the instinct of perpetuity.

But poverty is the most relentless of all destroyers. Its claws are sharp and its teeth vicious. The underfed mother can not properly nourish a child, and to be undernourished in infancy is to be undeveloped in mind and body, lacking in the force of intellect and brawn necessary to cope with the difficult problems of life.

If a valuable prize mare is in foal she receives every care, and so does the colt until after it passes the danger line. But it is not so with every wife who is about to become a mother, or with every child that it brought into the world.

The story of the mother bird and the cat is worthy of serious thought, for the lesson it teaches is of vital import to the future of humanity.

There are too many cats abroad, ready to devour the mother of man.

ED HOWARD BUYS WHITE FACES

A neighbor was over from the Drewsey country the other day and informed this paper that Ed. Howard, one of the extensive stock-growers of that section of the county had recently purchased several head of pure bred Hereford cattle. Among these cattle were some fine cows and a few good bulls. The cattle came from some point in Idaho.

Mr. Howard was in town himself later in the week but we did not have a chance to interview him on the late purchase. However, we congratulate him on his progressiveness in stocking up with this class of cattle as the time has come for our growers to breed up.

least one respect. It is becoming a great aid to the double standard of morality.

Buy a horn. Blow into it. Make a noise for this town. You will be heard.

There is one sweet consolation in being poor. We don't have to worry over how to prevent the government from annexing the most of our income.

With Carranza in his grave at the hands of a treacherous and brutal assassin, there is a possibility of a return to something like normal conditions in Mexico. A possibility—that's all.

In Spanish Morocco, a lecturer tells us, there is a tribe of natives who treat their wives as beasts of burdens and their daughters are sold to the highest bidder. But why pick on illiterate and unenlightened Morocco? We have only to look around in our own land to see the "beast of burden" at her toll and the daughter decked out in peekaboo finery to catch the richest husband.

Wise and Otherwise

We hasten to join our brothers of the press in saying nice things of the slain Carranza. We may want the same courtesy when we kick off.

An exchange says it is less dangerous to steal whisky than to buy it. No, there was no information as to where it was cached.

There are times, however, when the more we learn the less we desire to know.
