

JOHN BARRYMORE

EATS FOOD VISION

Why Big Scene Fails to Show in "Here Comes the Bride"

While John Barrymore's latest picture, "Here Comes the Bride," was being filmed, John Stuart Robertson, the director, wished to do a scene

Douglas Fairbanks in "Mr. Fixit" will also be remembered.

Now, in "The Way of a Man with a Maid," the new Paramount picture in which Bryant Washburn is starred, which will be shown at the Liberty theatre here Wednesday, Mr. Washburn again comes into his own with a charmingly conceived screen portrait of one Bick Olsen, a clerk, and the friend of Arthur McArney, played by Bryant Washburn.

Bick was one of these "got here boys," one of those "DO-IT-NOW" fellows, and he installed something of his pugna McArney. With Wanda Hawley, and the other members of a showing Mr. Barrymore in a hungry state where he could see a vision of food floating over his head.

It was only eleven o'clock in the morning and the director said to Mr. Barrymore, "What particular dish of food would most appeal to you?" Mr. Barrymore answered affably, "Bacon and eggs."

Later a waiter appeared from the hotel across the street bearing a tray upon which rested a plate of delicious bacon and eggs. Hal Young, the photographer, was planning to photograph it a little later, but Mr. Barrymore beat him to it and the vision was consumed before it could be visualized on the screen.

Mr. Barrymore explained that he thought Mr. Robertson was making him his breakfast. "Here Comes the Bride" will be shown at the Liberty theatre next Sunday, July 18. Fair money, a charming actress, is the leading woman.

REMEMBER FUNNY
FRED GOODWINS IN PICKFORD PICTURE

He Supports Bryant Washburn in "The Way of a Man with a Maid"

Do you remember the funny young man-about-town who appeared with Norman Kerry in support of Mary Pickford in "Amarilly of Clothes-line Alley"? That was Fred Goodwins. Goodwins is an Englishman and he has brought a new type of comedy to the screen. His excellent work with splendid company, Mr. Goodwins gives Washburn splendid support in this new Paramount picture.

The bright sunshine of summer days dispels the spirit of gloom, instills a feeling of hope, and brightens the human heart. It is the bright side of life that gives us the power to overcome the hardships of our daily lives. It diversifies our thoughts into pleasant channels and drives out the shadows which have gathered in during the winter months. It brings the sunshine of summer days, for its warm rays produce both the joy and the sustenance of life.
