ISN'T IT TRUE?

If a few of our most prominent citizens should propose that all business be suspended for a day, and that everybody get a pick or a shovel or some other implement and all turn out in a grand cleanup of the town, what would be the result?

It would go with a whoop, over the top and beyond. It would be a lark, and everybody would be happy and jolly and work like a hero.

But suppose the same gentlemen should propose that all business be suspended for a day and that all male citizens devote the day to cleaning up their own respective yards and other property. What would be the result in that case?

Not the same, by long odds.

Possibly a few would take the suggestion seriously, but a majority would pass it by with a jest or a smile.

It would be no lark to work alone, but only hard toil in the hot sun.

There would be no top to go over, no spectators on hand to applaud, and no dazzling in the spotlight of publicity.

It would be foolish to waste an entire day in such a humdrum manner, when the old yard looks fairly well as it is.

Now isn't that true?

THE BEAUTY OF WOMAN

Years ago, when the adults of the town were children, our mothers and our grandmothers and our aunts could hardly be induced to enter a beauty shop or purchase cosmetics from over the drug counter. It was considered vain and frivolous, and sobriety did not approve.

In those days women aged much more rapidly than they do today, and the wrinkles of time were in evidence early in life.

But today it is different, and it is well that it is so.

A man marries a woman because he is attracted to her and forms a lasting affection for her. It is but natural that he should take a pride in her beauty and in the charm of her character, and any harmless means that will aid in retaining either is more than justifiable in its employment.

The woman of the home takes pride in having that home neat and attractive, and spends many hours in adding those little touches which she knows are appealing to the man of her choice.

Is there any reason why she should be less particular in preserving her beauty of person than she is in retaining that of the home?

There is today no reason why a normally healthy woman should not retain much of the brightness and bloom of youth even to the brink of the grave. Certainly it is more rejuvenating to her and more pleasing to those who know and love her.

Do not criticise the woman who uses artificial means to retain her beauty of person on a par with that of her soul.

It is possible she is showing evidences of wisdom not possessed by some of her critics, for in the eyes of mankind the preservation of her charm is justifiable in every way.

MORE COMMERCIAL FERTILIZER USED

Increase in the use of commercial fertilizers in specialized and intensified farming is noted by the department of agricultural chemistry, O. A. C. experiment station. "Their agricultural value from an economic standpoint is not yet sufficiently recognized," says R. H. Robinson, research specialist. "The belief that commercial fertilizers are as yet unnecessary in this state is gradually changing." A list of every brand that can be sold in Oregon this year has been prepared for farmers by the station, and published in a bulletin for free distribution. The list gives the fertility content of every brand.

SODIUM FLUORID GETS HEN LICE

A single thorough application of sodium fluorid, either as dust or dip, will oust poultry lice, say the O. A. C. poultry specialists. This remedy comes as a whitish powder. One pound is enough to rid 100 hens of lice. It is safely used on either young or mature stock.

GOOD HAY CURED, NOT DRIED

Sun burned hay is not good hay. Well cured hay is cured either in windrows or in shocks, point out the farm crops specialists at O. A. C. It is allowed to lie in the swath only long enough to wilt, not to dry out. Sun drying wastes the juices, curing saves them.

Wise and Otherwise

Some girls marry for love and some for money, but most of them marry when they get a good chance.

The Fourth is a day of joy to the small boy with his bunch of firecrackers. To the man of maturity it is often one of regret that he can not exchange places with the boy.

The practice of pulling off a lot of private murders in a presidential year is poor taste and should be suppressed. It diverts the public mind from the few measly thrills still left in our political campaigns.

If you imigane that the penny has ceased to be a thing of value you are in error. It can be used to rub dry mud from clothing, as it has an edge that is not sharp enough to injure the cloth.

If you are angling for a husband, sister, don't bait your hook with sugar coated words. The use of s. will scare him.

If you know of something particularly "refreshing" that you want to reach the ears of a married man, just confide it to his wife as a profound secret which is to be kept religiously from him. He'll know it in record time.

When in doubt, do it. It's one way of getting ahead of the other fellow.

If Scotland goes dry, as is predicted, what in heck will we in dry America do for our good old reliable brand of Scotch?

A town in Peru has become so infested with rats the officials have voted to destroy all but six houses in order to get rid of them. That gives us an idea. We might try blowing up the country in order to get rid of the unwelcome bolsheviks, but probably it wouldn't work.

Consider the fly. It is only a fly, yet in its short life it can carry disease germs sufficient to start a plague that will overwhelm a nation of people. Swat the fly, before it swats you.

Encyclopaedias, we admit, contain a world of knowledge, but if you want the best and at first hand just marry a widow.

The anti-booze propaganda has won out, the anti-tobacco and other antic are skipping along, and in time we presume the anti-man movement will be in full swing.

Another week has passed into history and the Lord still permits us to eat three meals a day and wish we could eat four in order to get our money's worth.

Many preachers are complaining about the limited salaries they receive. But what more can they expect, when congregations are forced to listen to the unvarnished truth about themselves?

There is no denying the fact that this is a land of milk and honey, but many people don't know where the milk is and can't find the honey.

Close observers report but little change in the styles of men's garments this year, and but little reduction in the amount of change required to get them.

Some people are so fond of newspaper publicity they are willing to have even their escapades aired in order to get it. No, none of the breed in this town.
