KNOWLEDGE OF PUBLIC SPEAKING IS VALUABLE

Familiarity with Principles Would Aid Farmer in Selling His Products Points Out Specialist

The farmer and the engineer as well as the lawyer and the book agent should be able to talk in public according to Dr. G. R. Varney, instructor in public speaking and advertising at the Oregon Agricultural college. The engineer finds a knowledge of public speaking of value in explaining the engineering projects which he wants accepted, and the farmer can make use of the principles of public speaking in selling his products. Public speaking is useful in every line of work.

"Many a man who has made a success in business and along other lines has felt humiliated because he could not express himself when there was need for him to do so," said Dr. Varney. A prominent Oregon businessman on the O. A. C. board of regents visited a class in public speaking not long ago and expressed the wish that he had received such training in his youth. He confessed that he had often felt a sense of humiliation when called upon to speak.

"The man who can talk on his feet is able to fill a responsible place when called on to do so by his fellow men. He has the satisfaction of knowing that he can represent them and help their cause by his speaking ability. It has become a common occurrence for a farmer to be sent to the state legislature. As a legislator he must be able to talk upon certain measures for his constituents.

"In ordinary business dealings and affairs of life, it is the man who can talk and convince people who wins the man who is able to express himself is at a distinct advantage. The ability to speak with confidence before people is necessary for the greatest success in any line of work."
