

JUST A FEW FACTS

When a farmer ships a car load of cattle, or a ton of hay, or any other product away to the city market the money he received becomes a part of the wealth of this community. It is upon the income from the products that we ship away that we depend for the prosperity of our home people. That fact is plain to every thinking person. Every article we consume or use must come from some source. If it is produced at home the money we pay for it all remains in circulation at home. But if it is not produced here we must buy elsewhere. That, also, is a fact well known to all people. A retail merchant can buy the article we want from the manufacturer or wholesaler for considerably less than we would have to pay if we ordered direct from the factory. That is the discount made by manufacturers to all dealers. That is still another fact which requires no extraordinary amount of brains to understand. If we send away ourselves for what we want all of the money paid for the article goes out of the community and helps to enrich some person in some other community. If we buy from a local dealer the wholesale price only is sent away, the dealer's profit remains in circulation as part of the wealth of our own community. That is the most vital fact of all, and yet it is one which many excellent citizens seemingly fail to comprehend. A home trading community is invariably prosperous. A foreign trading one is more often depressed. In either case, it is as we make it. A little child is born—a girl. It lives, and grows, and goes to school, and in time becomes a beautiful young lady who looks good to the eyes of men. She is a good girl, pure in thought and act, but richly endowed with the fire of youth and life. She is admired, petted, praised, and courted by men—and envied by women. If she is wise and circumspect—a Solomon in petticoats—she may go through life without blemish in the eyes of the world. But if she makes one slip—commits even one small indiscretion—though the act may be innocent itself, her reputation is in the balance, with the chances ten to one it will be ripped to tatters. Such is the way of the world—for women. Another child is born—a boy. It, too, develops into one of life and spirits, and pursues the way of most boys who travel the road to man's estate. From boyhood to manhood there are many pitfalls for the unwary, into some of which he falls. There is a certain charm to these pitfalls—these illicit pleasures—which induces him to continue along the forbidden road. He makes many slips—commits many indiscretions—hits the high spots as he rushes through life. But his reputation does not suffer—he earns another instead. He becomes a man of the world, and is considered a live wire. Society beams, he yawns, and God frowns. Such, also, is the way of the world—for men. The time comes when a new town board must be chosen. Mr. X. is a worthy citizen, a business man, enjoying the respect and confidence of the entire community. Because of his popularity and his well known integrity he is elected to membership on the board. Many town improvements are needed, but available funds are low and only a few can be made in the immediate future. Mr. X. is mindful of his oath of office, which requires that in his official acts he must consider the welfare of the people as whole, and not those of any particular class or faction. He studies the situation carefully and is convinced that a certain improvement is of more vital importance to the public than any of the others that are desired. He advocates that improvement, and votes for it, although people are importuning him daily to favor improvements in the immediate vicinity of their own homes. His action is condemned by the disappointed ones, and he is roundly denounced as a man of ulterior motives and one who plays favorites in public affairs. The erstwhile highly respected citizen becomes a victim of his own conscience and his desire to do right. But it is only the way of the world for public officials. A bomb is carted into a public place and explodes. Hundreds of people are killed or maimed for life—innocent persons against whom the perpetrators could have no possible grievance. Everybody is horrified—the public becomes excited—news papers dish up volumes of details—man hunters scour the country in frantic haste—everybody tells everybody else what should or should not be done—and in a week's time the whole thing is buried in forgetfulness in the face of a new sensation. The arm of the law is long, but if those who wield it are short sighted it avails but little in the end. Forgetfulness induces short sightedness—short sightedness is the father of undue leniency—and leniency to perpetrators invites repetitions of such diabolical acts. But it's only the way of the world—or of this country. WILL FEEDING STEERS PAY? New light on feeding practices that help determine whether it will pay livestock men to buy up feeder steers and fatten for the market, is shed by the reports of six years' feeding tests at the Union branch experiment station. The reports have been published in bulletin form—"Fattening Steers"—copies of which are free to Oregon citizens. Send to O. A. C. Corvallis. The "eat step" is the latest thing in dancing. But the four legged cats can't help it—poor things.

Could Not Stoop To Tie His Shoes Gets Rid of Rheumatism and Gains Twenty Four Lbs. By Taking Tanlac.

"Tanlac not only added twenty-four pounds to my weight but put me in as good health as I ever was in my life," said Augustus Heils, a well-known farmer of Morton, Ill. "For four years I was troubled with rheumatism and indigestion he continued, "and many a day I gave clean out while working in the field and had to lie down until I got strength enough to get back to the house. My rheumatism was so bad that every morning I had to rub my legs before I could stand up and my back was so stiff and painful that it nearly killed me to stoop over. My joints, too, were so stiff and sore that I could not bend over to tie my shoes. My appetite was very poor and when I did eat anything I was in misery for hours afterwards. I was hardly ever able to get a good night's rest because my kidneys were so badly out of order, and last spring my condition got so bad I wasn't able to work for several weeks I could hardly get out of the house. "The man I hired to take my place recommended Tanlac so highly that I began taking it, and to make a long story short, I haven't a pain in my body now and can do as hard a day's work as any man. I eat three square meals a day, digest them perfectly and sleep like a top every night. In fact, I couldn't ask to be in better health, and all the credit is due to Tanlac." Tanlac is sold in Burns, by Reed and in Crane by Crane Mercantile Co. —Adv.

Delay means decay paint right away with FULLER PAINT

THE life, the value, the beauty of your home, depend on the care you give it. Weather-beaten and warped siding, cracks and open joints are forerunners of decay. Many property owners neglect to look for such signs, judging their houses and buildings by general appearances only. It is good business to make regular inspection of your property, and to use paint of good quality, which is the surest preventive of decay. Through the varying conditions of weather in all their extremes, FULLER Paint has proved both its preserving and beautifying qualities—a Pacific Coast Product for Pacific Coast requirements. 71 years of paint manufacturing experience are back of every brushful of FULLER Paint.
