

FROM BROADWAY TO DESERT BIG JUMP; SEE "PARTNERS 3"

Enid Bennett's New Ince Film Runs Gamut of Human Emotions

Running the gamut of human emotions that throng the Great White Way to the grim battle for existence in the Great American desert, "Partners Three," the new Paramount picture, starring Enid Bennett, will be shown at the Liberty Theatre tomorrow.

It tells the story of a girl who longs to be removed from the distasteful life of cabaret dancer and who accepts a Westerner's proposal of marriage as her salvation, only to discover, too late, that the man with whom she has linked her life is a drunkard and a coward.

She is first seen in a mental struggle, trying to maintain her ideals amid surroundings of depravity; later she appears in a fight against nature, lost on a desert where she is confronted by the immensity of space, the poison of reptiles, the lack of water; and still later she must battle against society, trying to uphold the cause of charity in the face of false friends of propriety.

It is one of the greatest emotional parts ever entrusted to Miss Bennett, and gives her a wonderful scope for acting. It was designed to portray a woman confronted with all the great problems of life the struggle against nature for existence, the inward fight for the establishment of ideals and the relationship she must bear to society and its laws. The story was written by J. G. Hawkes, and the director was Fred Niblo, husband of the star.

PUBLIC DISPLAYS GREAT INTEREST IN "CAPTAIN KIDD, JR."

Mary Pickford's New Picture Is Based on Rida Johnson Young's Play.

There has been no little interest aroused by the announcement that Mary Pickford was to appear as Mary MacTavish in the screen version of "Captain Kidd, Jr.," Rida Johnson Young's exquisite little play which met with such pronounced success on the legitimate stage in New York two years ago. Frances Marion wrote the photoplay and Wm. D. Taylor directed Miss Pickford in what is claimed to be the most effective Artercraft vehicle.

In choosing the cast, much care was taken to select types who would fittingly portray the characters made familiar by the stage production. Mary Pickford was ideal as Mary MacTavish, but it was not so easy to surround her with just the needed types. However, after much search these were found and the choice in each individual case has been admirable. "Captain Kidd, Jr." will be displayed at the Liberty Theatre on Sunday November 14.

Douglas MacLean, one of the most pleasing of juvenile leading men, portrays Jim Gleason. That sterling character actor, Spottiswoode Aitken is a wonderful MacTavish. It is said, while Robert Gordon, the Huck Finn, of the Tom Sawyer pictures, is well cast as Willie Carleton. Winter Hall plays John Brent and Marcela Manon, who played the role of the unpleasant wife in "Stella Maris," interpret the part of Marion Fisher, Victor Potel, tall and thin, is screamingly funny, it is said, as Sam, the constable, while Mrs. Moore gives a good performance as Luella Butterfield.

With such a cast and a play with so much merit, the production of "Captain Kidd, Jr." should prove even more pleasing than the stage play which won praise from critics and the public far and near.

LADIES' AND MISSES' CHIC SWEATER

This dainty little sweater is a very serviceable piece of wearing apparel for the school or office. It has a low cut neck with a very wide collar which hangs over the shoulders. The sleeves are tight fitting with a large bell cuff. The jacket is dored at the bottom with only a ribbon looped through for a belt finished with a couple of buttons.

Coming Wednesday night, at the Liberty Theatre.
