

The Pianist--Premier

Paderewski was no born musician—he sprang from a line of farmers. Nature apparently did not plan him for an artist. His stubby hands and thumbs were a great handicap—and his teachers discouraged him and advised him to quit.

But Paderewski persisted. Eight hours a day—for two-thirds of his life he practiced. Those were long, hard discouraging years—but he held on—and now, for 30 years, he has been the world's premier pianist.

We, who have tried again and again to succeed, to save, but have failed—and are discouraged—should take renewed courage from the life of this great artist—and stick to it.

If so—we cannot fail.
