POPULAR SENTIMENT IN FAVOR OF LAW AND ORDER.

The best editorial on the subject of the hanging of the four anarchists concerned in the murder of a policeman while in discharge of his duty of trying to maintain law and order, we find in the St. Louis Globe Democrat, the live republican daily of the Mississippi valley, and make extracts for the benefit of our readers, who have not read leading editorial of the general press of the country. Its length as compared with the long articles expressing similar sentiment, in other journals, recommends it to our columns:

"The hanging of the Chicago anarchists must be regarded as another signal and impressive illustration of the law in this country. The parties in question had every opportunity to defend themselves. The courts gave patient and careful consideration to every point in their case, and public sentiment freely conceded them all the rights of other accused persons, even to that of seeking executive clemency after their conviction. * * * Their guilt was manifest from the beginning * * * and when, at last, they were led to the gallows, the country looked on with a feeling of approval not by reason of personal animosity toward them, but because the law had dealt thoroughly with all the circumstances involved in the matter and duly pronounced sentence of death upon them. * * * It is thus that the majesty of the law invariably commands the respect and concurrence of the American people; and it is this uniform reverence for the law as a surpassing force that makes our government so reliable and so effective in every emergency. We are not always strictly prudent in speech and action, and oftentimes our boasted freedom brings us gravely near to disaster; but the moment that the law intervenes with a final decision upon any controverted point, we yield prompt obedience, and all discussion is hushed quite as a matter of course. When we proclaim our devotion to liberty as the true political theory and best hope of civilization, we mean always that form of liberty which is only another name for peace and order, and which implies that a supreme regard for the law is the first duty of patriotism. * * * Every general election, in fact, is a striking proof of the doctrine that whatever the law sanctions and declares to be right and proper we are bound to accept as a thing that admits of no dispute or resistance. It is for this reason, mainly, that anarchy can never gain a secure foothold in the United States. Our traditions, our methods of thought, our habits of feeling, are all against it because it begins and ends with systematic hostility to the law and the authority of the law's representatives. There is no chance for any theory to live and thrive here which conflicts with this great and potent popular sentiment in favor of ready and quiet submission to the mandates of justice as framed by our legislators and interpreted by our courts; and in this fact lies the country's assured safety and highest honor."

THE HERALD is the only democratic newspaper in Grant county; another stirring reason for some republican papers to long and loudly cry out against its establishment; having been accustomed from early infancy to governmental patronage, they so hate to give it up, that in domestic matters they have resort to the familiar, old "neutral" "independent" political trick—"we don't need any political papers," "party lines are so loosely drawn," [an unconscious admission that the lines are drawn, just a little], "old issues being dead," ["still harping on my daughter"], etc.—but the old dodge don't work as heretofore: it is so transparent that most any weakly democrat can see through it, and even they cry out when they see the deceptive words, Neutral and Independent, "Ah, that's too stale, when you stick such ears out from the lion's skin, we know you, and don't you forget it."

"Equal and exact justice to all, and exclusive privileges to none," is the corner-stone of a republican form of government.

AS WILL be seen by reference to our columns Lakeview is a wide-awake town and represented by an enterprising county newspaper in The Examiner.

FROM L. D. MONTGOMERY, OF Burns, we learn Mr. Herman of Portland, in an interview at Albany with the chief-engineer of the Oregon Pacific, was told by him that the road would be through Harney valley in eighteen months.

AS WILL be seen occasional numbers of THE HERALD contains an advertisement of Eastern Oregon, or Grant county, presented our readers free of charge.

If the paper can afford to give so much of its space to advertise the country named, each subscriber ought to do his share for the general good by mailing one or more copies for three months to friends, relatives or acquaintances east—only four-bits will pay for that time.

THERE is a class of newspaper men possessed of no other capacity for the business than a talent for mud-throwing at neighbors; having no disposition to enter into controversial relation with such persons, but a journalistic ambition, instead, to give subscribers a better edited, newsier, better printed sheet than such men are able or willing to give, we shall, as is our practice, endeavor to avoid it, yet when patience ceases to be a virtue, we never fail to entertain strangers and return compliments, so, "Lay on, McDuff, and damned be he who cries, hold! enough!"

READERS, if you would like to have an extra bright, interesting paper visit your home this year, take your pen and give your individual views on any subject of general interest, and we will put it in shape for publication.

It is not a composition, such as the school teacher requires, merely a collection of nicely turned sentences as a test of scholarship, that an editor asks of his readers, but original ideas on any of the many subjects, of common interest to all, nor, when he requests them to write for the paper, does he mean that he wants any one to devote his time and energies to editing the paper, as that job is too easy to give out, for every man is able to edit a newspaper better than the man on the tripod, for all he has to do, you know, is to find some subject upon which to vent the vituperative force of his nature (in other words, to bring into weekly exercise the baser elements of his mind), in the choicest billingsgate in his vocabulary. But what he does want is for the reader to think on a subject worthy of thought, political, religious, or social, (practical or theoretical), sit down on one the many long evenings now at his command, and give the result of his thoughts in plain words and writing, regardless of extra effort at punctuation, spelling, capitalizing, or relation of one part of speech to another, and so we are able to grasp the ideas, he may even write upon both sides of the paper, without offense to our indulgent compositors.

THE New Atlas, published by S. D. Ross, at Vale, Malheur co., Oregon, reached our desk 25th inst. It is a neatly printed, five column folio, made up of all-at-home outside and ready-print inside.

We learn by scanning its advertising columns, that Vale has one lawyer, two hotels, two saloons, one saddler and harness shop, one drug store, one general merchandise store, one feed stable, and two black smith shops, but it has to depend upon Ontario for a physician's services (some one of the many young medical men back east ought to make a note of this) and one newspaper office.

Hurrah for the Atlas! Long may he continue to carry the little world of Vale on his head and hands and reap as much profit therefrom, as Atlas, leader of the Titans, reaped renown—our readers can readily see that THE HERALD, although claiming the whole of Eastern Oregon as its field of labor, is not so hide-bound in its own conceit and avaricious desire to monopolize the benefits of publication, as to claim exclusive privileges, take a malicious fever and impotently rave for weeks over the advent of every new paper that enters upon the work of letting a thirsting world know of the blooming fields and pastures green of Eastern Oregon, denouncing them as "poaching on our manor," etc. As we said last week, "there is always room at the top," and heaven speed the paper whose merits place it on the topmost round!

CORRESPONDENCE.

EDITOR HERALD: I have read with pleasure the first issue of THE HERALD. The straight-forward and fearless manner in which its policy is set forth and its principles avowed, will meet, I am sure, with a hearty response from the intelligent and progress-loving people of Harney Valley, in a full measure of patronage and support. I have waited anxiously for the appearance of THE HERALD, in order that I might thoroughly satisfy myself as to its aims and objects, and discover if there was any truth in the reiterated statements of the Other Publication, that it was to be the organ of the stockmen and other land-grabbing corporations, having interests in this section. In order that my investigations might be the more complete, I called at THE HERALD office, and received permission to look over the names of those who signed the subscription list, and out of about three hundred signatures, I only found the names of three of the large stock owners of Grant county affixed. This fact of itself ought to show that the statements of the Items man are base fabrications, and deserve to be mentioned only that they may be despised. But when coupled with the clear enunciation of the editor's sentiments in his "salutatory," it will surely preclude the possibility of any sane man harboring such an idea, even for a moment.

The selfish endeavor of certain parties to stir up bad blood between the large property owners and the settlers in this valley, with a view to their own personal aggrandizement—that their purse might be replenished with the profits of disorder—is to be deeply deplored; and its authors deserve the severest condemnation. Such a condition of things has a tendency, more than anything else, to retard the development and prosperity of the country. I hold that the first duty of a newspaper, should be to stimulate and encourage every undertaking, which has for its object, the utilizing of natural resources, and the developing of local enterprise. Such, I infer from the tenor of THE HERALD, will be its aim. But I am constrained to say that the opposite policy has been followed heretofore, by those who set themselves up as leaders of public opinion, and who, instead of trying to harmonize and quiet the jarring elements existing in the community, seemed only bent on inciting to violence, and fomenting discord.

There should be no conflict; there is no conflict of interests: Let each respect the other's right, as guaranteed by the law of the land, and peace and harmony will prevail. Then we can all put our shoulders to the wheel, and hurry along the development of the great natural resources, with which this region is blessed, and make its prosperity equal to if not greater than any other community in the state. In this task of progress, THE HERALD will be a powerful factor. May it never deviate from the line of action indicated in its opening issue, and continue to deal equal justice to all, regardless of creed, color, or condition. By so doing it will compel success. MAX MUELLER.
