LOCAL NEWS HARNEY VALLEY.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 18, 1888.

To School Directors and Teachers.

County School Superintendent H. F. Dotson has appointed David L. Grace Deputy for the east of Grant county. Parties having business transact with the superintendent will find Mr. Grace at THE HERALD office, Burns, Or.

—Mrs. D. Jamison is still very sick.

—Colds were generally prevalent last week.

—Mr. Mahon, of Cow creek, drove a band of jacks and jennets through Burns, Sunday.

—Thos. Haskell brought his fine young scion of the Morgan and Henry stock, in Burns, Sunday, to be weighed: 1396 lbs. the result.

—Last Thursday, while J. C. Wooley was cutting wood, a sliver struck him in the right eye, nearly blinding him for several hours; he is all right now.

—C. M. Caldwell, a Mexican soldier of Burns, is to receive a pension of $8 per month in recognition of his services to his country. An entertaining sketch will be given in next issue.

—THE HERALD's recognition as a genuine newspaper publication, with permission to enjoy the U. S. postal privileges to that effect, was received from the U. S. postoffice department by Judge Parker, 18th inst.

—Mr. and Mrs. P. Clemens were visiting in Burns Sunday 22d inst. Mrs. Clemens, accompanied by Mrs. Lee Caldwell, called on the HERALD. Mr. and Mrs. Clemens have resided in Harney valley since 1881.

—Call at the office of W. J. Miller, Attorney-at-law, at Harney City, Oregon, and secure you a piece of school land. Has as plats of all the vacant school lands in the valley. Plats corrected every week from Salem, Oregon. 7*

—THE HERALD acknowledges a courteous invitation on Wednesday evening to sample the young ladies' basket supper, which ye editor did, and declares the supper is the direct cause of the young gentlemen's petition for another Leap Year Ball.

—Some 10 or 12 days ago, as F. C. Hixson was riding homeward from Burns, when within about a half mile of home, he came upon a coyote in the road. He gave chase, intending if possible to drive the animal to the house—and he not only succeeded, but drove it into the corral, where he shot it.

—The Charity ball given on the 20th inst., as advertised in THE HERALD, was a successful affair: 27 numbers were sold; the hall and music free, a basket supper served, and Mrs. M. A. Fry donated use of her dining-room, the hot coffee, and table service; we do not give list of couples in attendance because it was not sent in.

—A letter from Grant's Pass last Wednesday, to Henry Caldwell, whose wife and children are wintering there, states that Wallace, his second son, a brigni, lovable child of five years, died suddenly [illegible] 4th; that the little one did not appear to be ill beyond a cold, and evening bronchial affection, and ate breakfast that morning as usual, and by 9 o'clock had passed out of life. The father was prostrated by the shock, being in high fever on Friday. The sympathy of a host of friends is with the sorrowing parents. LATER: Another letter reached the bereaved father yesterday announcing the death of his youngest daughter, Jennie, a pretty little girl of three years, on Jan. 8; sickness same as described above. Mr. Caldwell left Burns this morning for Grant's Pass.

—C. S. Unger is taking orders for the Bloomington nursery in Lake county; the resident people of Harney valley ought to buy freely of this stock, as it is specially grown for the northwest and will do well here. In reply to the assertion that nothing will grow here: Mrs. Haskell raises fine vegetables and flowers from seed; Mrs. P. Clemens has shrubbery that is very promising; Mrs. Lee Caldwell has six very thrifty young peach trees from the seed; Mrs. Grace is growing two ice trees, potted in native soil a month ago, quite successfully; while Mr. Ziegler of Poison creek, and Mr. Brown of Harney City, exhibit garden vegetables in the Burns market that cannot be surpassed for size and flavor. Before making orders for next spring, call at our office and look over the Bloomington catalogue's.

—The Prineville stage, as was suggested by Judge Parker when sensational rumors reported it lost, did not attempt to make the trip on Thursday 12th, the postmaster believing it too hazardous an undertaking. The stage left Prineville for Burns on Monday 16th inst., but did not get in until the 20th, the driver having to cut his way through from the head of Ochoco to Ceelin on Silver Creek. The Vale-Burns line has not failed to undertake by bring in its mail, but its drivers have overcome obstacles to get their mails through that would deter the stoutest hearts, for instance: S. W. Wilson, on the Beulah to Dreway route, brought the Friday's mail on the latter place, where Thos. Haskell, the Dreway to Burns driver, received it. Heavy drifts were encountered between Dreway and Pine creek, and the two drivers shouldered a load three days to get through, and did not get in until Wednesday night. Wilson's face and hands were frozen.

The Leap Year Ball.

The Young Ladies of Burns availed themselves of the privileges of the season, and issued invitations for a grand Leap Year Ball, the proceeds to be given a poor woman, Mrs. Hackman and her family. They engaged the hall and musicians, cooked a handsome basket supper which was graciously served by Mrs. Parker at her residence, selected and escorted their partners, and "saw their home," in orthodox masculine style, but with a grace and lady-like courtesy that was only equalled by the modest and gentle demeanor of the fortunate recipients; as this lady's favor is only vouchsafed the sterner sex once in four years, it is said they insisted upon receiving their due down to the smallest trifle, and in turn the thirstiest man there refrained from even the least indulgence in the favorite beverage or cigarette; nor did the fair ones forget to seat their partners after each set in the coldest place in the hall, and rush off and gather about the more comfortable stove. $40 was realized; $30 covered expenses—$10 for the hall, and $20 for the music; Mrs. Parker donated the coffee; $10 was paid Mrs. Hackman. It closed at 3 a. m. Thursday, and is spoken of generally as one of the most delightful affairs. The following is a list of couples, as obtained:

Difference Between Common Sense and Fool Sense.

Business men will find that Lakeview, Lake county, Oregon, comprises: 1 newspaper; 2 hotels; 1 grocer; 2 saloons; 1 brewery; 1 undertaker; 2 laundries; 1 furniture store; 1 shoe shop; 1 meat market; 4 lawyers; 3 physicians; 1 surveyor; 1 land agent; 1 dentist; 1 druggist; 1 jeweler; 2 blacksmiths; 2 harness shops; 1 livery stable; 1 bakery; 3 general merchandise stores; 1 lath house; 1 milliner shop; 1 real estate agent; 0 hardware shops; 1 barber shop; 2 saw-mills; 0 ladies nurse; 0 carpenter; 0 reading room. Also, 2 masonic lodges; 1 good Templar lodge; 2 I. O. O. F. lodges; 1 A. O. U. W. lodge; 1 school house church. All these facts are told to the business world 52 times in a year by the votes of its town newspaper.—East Oregon Herald.

The only reason that so many firms are not enumerated is from the fact that their advertisements do not appear in the EXAMINER, the "voice of the town," as the HERALD puts it. If you want your business known inside and outside your county, there is only one way to do it—advertise.—Lake County Examiner.

The items not daring to quote the paragraph advertising Burns at length as did the Examiner, rants after this style:

The Herald says that "business men abroad will find that Burns has no brewery no laundry, no shop, no bakery, no church." The Herald grossly misrepresents the business of Burns that it amounts almost to a libel on the town, etc.

A Call—A. F. & A. M.

All Masons in good standing are requested by brethren in Harney valley to meet in Burns on Saturday, February 11, for the purpose of organizing a lodge U. D.

NOTICE TO DEBTERS.

All parties knowing themselves indebted to me Dec. 31st, 1887, are hereby notified that their accounts are now due, and as I am designs of closing all accounts to begin with the New Year, Debtors are urgently requested to come in and settle at once.

THE SILVER WEDDING.

Every day discovered new points for admiration in disposition as well as accomplishments of this sweet elder sister in a family of boys. And she seemed to brighten and grow happier with each day, like a drooping flower reviving under sparkling dews and warm sunlight. Her chief delight was when the curtains were drawn and the pleasures of the evening home circle showed each of us at our best; though shy, she never refused to "act well her part," whether it was reading, recitation, music, chess, or conversation.

"Miss Conner, allow me a great pleasure, that of introducing my friend, Mr. Connaugh," gayly cried my husband, coming in from the office with his partner the second week of her visit.

"Oh, darling!" exclaimed that gentleman, involuntarily stretching both arms toward the girl, who instinctively drew closer to my side.

Mr. Connaught, instantly regaining his self-possession, earnestly entreated pardon for "an irrepressible impulse to greet a very dear friend, of whom the young lady so forcibly reminded him," and, with his usual gay and happy manner, ignored the little incident. Never was he, with all his rich humor, in a more attractive mood, and our shy, sweet Ailie was charmed into singing for him a number of Mollie's old country airs.

He leant over her as she sang with the air of a lover, and seemed scarcely to breathe, as at his request she repeated the words of "An Irishman's Dream of Erin."

"She recounted the raddies of liberty,
And grieved o'er the graves that the exiles filled over,
And she asked for the wrongs of her country,
As she strayed along Erin's green shore."

Mr. Connaught's voice was melodious with feeling as he repeated the lines from the song, as he came forward and seated himself by my husband, who laughingly said, "I told you so!" as he made room for him.

"The worst case of love at first sight I ever heard of," was Mr. Osmond's decision when good nights had been said.

Mr. Connaught boarded with us, and in the days and weeks that came and went with unwonted swiftness in our quiet home, we saw that our friend was, with his deep, earnest nature, forever lost in love with our fair guest, and I could not see that it was returned. When I thought it possible she might not appreciate the depth of feeling she had won, I could almost wish she had not become the sunlight of our home.

Everything seemed to blossom into love that she smiled upon, he said, softly, to me one evening. The house plants seemed to raise their heads more proudly and give out their choicest perfumes, and the birds in their cages called to her in their sweetest tones, when she entered the room.

A lover's fancy, but she was the idol of the house.

At that moment I heard Ailie and her mother come in from an afternoon walk. As I was about to speak, Mollie rushed forward with both hands outstretched.

"Ailie!"

"Maillie McCree!"

They stood with their hands joined, and in speechless surprise gazed into each other's faces with searching eyes. Woman-like, Mollie was first to break the painful silence.

"Sure, whin me Ailie here was tellin me the day, of the dear friend of Mr. and Mrs. Osmond, that loved her and had asked her to be his wife, I niver thought it c'uld be me own Pahdna O'Connaught. Don't ye know I'd say yis to him? Is it not meself that knows him as the only man living that's worth the love of me own girleen?"

"And I may claim her?"

"Indeed is it the great joy av me life to give me own swate Ailie in the keping av a man like Pahdna O'Connaught," was the emphatic reply of true-souled Mollie Connor.

He wound his arms about the slender form of the daughter, and, as he drew the lovely head to his bosom, murmured his joy in willing ears.

"Ah, ma'am," said Mollie, with happy tears in her eyes as we slowly strolled down the walk to the front gate, "is it not a grand thing for me to be givin me child into the kapin av the besht man on earth? I've alwis been that grained that Pahdna did not ask me for his wife, before I ran away with me aunt an uncle, an came to this country, but now am I happy woman that he niver thought to do that same, for see, God knew what I'd live to be wantin most. Dear, dear little Ailie!"

After the happy girl retired that night Mr Connaught told my husband and me the story of his love in the old country for the bewitching little Mollie McCree, who had seemed to take an unaccountable delight in avoiding him, and finally had slipped off with relatives to America. How he had come over to find her. That he had dropped the prefix O' last hearing the name she might elude him as of old. For 25 years, or since he was 20 years old, he had searched for her, and as, to him, she had never grown any older than when she had last seen her at sweet sixteen, he felt he had at last found her when Ailie suddenly appeared before him.

And in all the ten happy years that have become a part of the past, he has never been able to identify my Mollie Connor with his lost love, Maillie McCree.
