The growth of Oregon during the next few years promises to be equal to the development of Kansas and Nebraska immediately after railroad connection from the East.-Ex.

On silk dress and piece goods and silk ribbons, the tariff rate this year was 50 per cent. On woolen goods, it was 70 per cent. Which class is "protected" by this specimen of high tariff-the rich or the poor?

In an interview with the Washington agent of the Associated Press, Gen. Sheridan declared that he would not accept the republican presidential nomination if offered him.

A LETTER from Portland, dated Feb. 28, says: "Gov. Penoyer has been confined to his house by sickness in his family, and has lost a young daughter-the pet of the family." The people, irrespective of party, deeply sympathize with the Governor in his sad affliction.

The tariff rate on plate glass last year-an article chiefly used by the rich-was 37 per cent, while on common window glass, so largely used by the poor, it was 92 per cent. Yet the republican party "points with pride" to the benefits bestowed upon the working classes by this same high tariff!

The last session of congress passed an act known as the "Hatch bill," to establish agricultural experimental stations in connection with the agricultural colleges of the several states, and providing $15,000 for each state. Gov. Penoyer treasury accepting the grant of money, and designating the board of regents of the agricultural college of Oregon as the proper board to which the fund should be paid.

An exchange says, speaking of a democratic candidate for congress: "Eastern Oregon, we think, is entitled to the nomination, and if it is Luther B. Ison, he is the proper man. He it was who led the van in the fight for the President. He has stood to the fore here for years, to build up democratic majorities this side of the mountains, and what makes us love him most, is, that he is honest and the corporations don't own a single hair of his head."

The government is collecting $500,000 a day, $15,000,000 a month, and $180,000,000 a year in excess of its needs. Shall the surplus be stopped or spent? If stopped how? This is the question and this the issue. Why do not the republicans meet it instead of shouting "Free Trade?" They know, and the country knows, that a tariff 20 per cent less than the present war maximum would be adequate for both protection and revenue. Their last president and their last two secretaries of the treasury urged a reduction. Their own tariff commission recommended it and their own congress promised it. By dodging the issue, the republicans confess the weakness of their case. The democrats have forced the issue. Let them now force the fighting upon it.-State Rights Democrat.

Don't get scared at the cry of free trade. Grant, Hayes and Arthur all recommended reduction of the tariff duties. Mr. Cleveland made his recommendation of a reduction of the tariff. Nobody called him a free trader. Garfield in a speech to congress 20 years ago, while he was a member of the Golden club, the great free trade Junta of England, said, "I favor the tariff as now fixed in order that it may bring us the blessings of free trade in the near future." England raises more money by a revenue tariff than we, but she is called a free trade nation. Mr. Cleveland has recommended a reduction of taxation and that has interfered with monopolists who hope to snare the people into jinning fits by this cry of free trade. Don't be children, farmers. Stand shoulder to shoulder.-Ex.

No one knows how much he has to pay in tariff taxes, and a great many don't seem to care to know. It is this torpid state of the taxpayer which caused Mr. Blaine exceedingly to remark that "it is easier to collect $10 by indirect tax than to collect $1 by direct levy." In this conclusion Mr. Blaine is exactly right, but is it a tax any exacter to pay? Protectionists do not so claim, but they beg the whole question of taxation by asserting that "a duty laid for the purpose of protection is not a tax." But the importer, who pays the duty, adds it to the price of the article imported and the consumer, of course, ultimately pays it.-Argus, Augusta, Maine.

It is authentically declared that Roscoe Conkling has said to some of his friends that if the next presidential campaign is fought on the tariff issue, between Blaine and Cleveland, he is prepared to take the stump for Cleveland, believing, that the republican party cannot without violating its pledges and bringing reproach upon its name, refuse to reduce the taxes which weigh so heavily on producers and consumers. Mr. Conkling is further credited with the remark that President Cleveland's last message was one of the wisest, boldest and most patriotic evidences of statesmanship of recent years.-New York Times.

The Oregonian says: "A good round sum-not less than $25,000,000 a year, for several years to come, ought to be appropriated for rivers and harbors." In 1882, when congress appropriated $18,000,000, the same paper said: "These figures need no comment. They tell their own story of wastefulness, log-rolling, vote-swapping and consequently demoralization." Then, it sought to build up a reputation for economy for its own party, but now it seeks to establish a reputation of extravagance for the democrats.

How very kind and liberal are the republican organs in advising democrats how to spend public money.-Ex.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND has sent a special message to congress in relation to the Pacific railroad system. Oregon is involved, through its connection with this system. The Central Pacific is mainly mentioned. In this system are included the Oregon & California road and the California & Oregon road. It is the land grants to these different yet inclusive roads, to which the President calls the attention of congress. He maintains that there are existing obligations which the railroad companies have not fulfilled, and he recommends to congress such legislation as shall require their fulfillment. The President suggests some rather drastic legislation. Now, what will congress do?-Portland News.

A correspondent of the Dalles Times-Mountaineer, writing from Chico, Cal, says "aside from a few semi-tropical fruit raised here, Oregon will discount this part of the Sacramento valley in every kind of grain and fruits. Oregon can raise more wheat, oats and corn to the acre, and better potatoes, in fact the potatoes raised here are very poor; as for apples, Sacramento valley cannot raise them successfully. Chico is now supplied with apples shipped from Ashland, Oregon.

It appears to me on the whole that this country has no advantage over Oregon, and I believe that if the same amount of printer's ink were used to advertise Oregon as is in California, Oregon could rightfully enjoy as big a boom as California. But I had to come here to see for myself; this is the trouble with too many. I shall however send my way back toward the webfoot or bunchgrass country before the warm weather sets in and the shaking of dry bones commences.

Think of it, Oregonians, a land that boasts of its semi-tropical fruits, fertility of soil and abundance all kinds of fruits, apples are worth $2 a box and poor at that.

Give me a land that will raise the necessities of life even if it is a little colder in winter. We can do without lemons and oranges, but give us pure air and good cool water, not red land and stones. Ho, for Oregon, the land of bunchgrass!"

A Literary Curiosity.
