After using Warner's Log Cabin Cough and Consumption Remedy, he says, under date of January 19th, 1888: "I do not bleed at the lungs any more, my cough does not bother me, and I do not have any more smothering spells." A Fortunate Druggist.

Mr. Edwin W. Joy for many years and now a prosperous druggist on the corner of Stockton and Market streets in San Francisco, probably never dreamed of rivaling in wealth the medicine kings of the country. But various rumors having been floating around to the effect that he has struck it big, an Examiner reporter was detailed to unearth the cause, and after much difficulty unraveled the follow; ing story:

It seems that about seven years ago an English physician, a great student of botany, located for a brist season in this city. His practice was not extensive, and yet the few cases of a general nature that came to him attracted no little attention. His greatest success seemed to be in the treatment of liver and kidney disorders, and vitiated blood. In fact his ability to cope with these common complaints was little short of the marvioux. He seemed almost intallible, and his quick, modest methods and his well kept secret was as much a mystery as himsel. Ufter his departure about a year later Mr. Joy determined to fathom the secret, and e pying all the prescriptions he had filled for the erratic doctor, he began a systematic analysis. In his examination he discovered running all through the prescriptions for liver and kidney troubles, vitiated blood and stomatic formation of California, so simple and so well known under homely every day names to every school by as to entirely dissipate the suspicion that they were the active principles involved. So certain, however, was Mr. Joy that he had discovered the secret that he embodied the new elements in a preparation of Sar. y that he had discovered the secret that he of the new elements in a preparation of Sar-ia to disguise the tasts, and put it before his ers under the modest name of Joy's excetable wills. Immediately the same marvelous came back of its automishing effects, and the y was solved, and the talk it has created has caused it to step into prominence, and orders in daily from all over the coast. Propie seem taking it and writing and taking shout it hout the State. And thus another California by least into a cristence. S. F. Eraminer.

LIFE IN MINNESOTA.

Pleasant Reminiscences Concerning Its Cool, Shady Climate. My attention has been called by something I have seen in the papers to the cool, shady climate enjoyed by the State of Minnesota during several months of twang, and yet it is a fact caused and our dry stimulating atmosphere, and the year. I spent the early part of my the universal presence of catarrhal life in the State, and listened many thousand times to the statement continued in the statement caused in the statement continued in the statement caused in the statement caused in the statement continued in the statement caused in cerning the dry air. Perhaps my earliest remembrance is of the doctor standing over the cradle and looking down at me. "Of course," said the physician, "he is squint-eyed and red-headed in stomach action caused by imprudence in eating and by want of regular experience will bring him out all right."

The people of Minnesota have never, as a class, lost their enthusiasm on the subject of the dry air and the impossibility of feeling the cold. Some individuals have, of course, lost some of their ardor, but the people as a whole remain true. I refer above particularly to a man I once saw get up in a public meeting to speak in eulogistic terms of the dry air. He had just opened his mouth to begin, when a long, gray streak of it happened to come in the key-hole and freeze his mouth open, so that it was necessary to put his head in the oven to thaw it out.

This booming the dry air is discouraging work, but still the hardy Minnesota pioneers keep on. Nothing daunts These two remedies plentifully used as them. A member of the Legislature the spring and summer seasons adrises in his place to introduce a bill defreedom, both from catarrh and those to find his teeth frozen together. Shortly afterwards, the weight that had been placed on had occasion to go to a neighbor's place a mile or so distant. With a calm. childlike faith which it was beautiful to see Mr. Johnson cut down a couple of small fruit trees, took them under his arm, and walked out into the unknown, trackless storm. After he had wandered three days and three nightshe ran onto an agent for a nursery frozen stiff and with over a hundred trees in his wagon. Then Mr. Johnson lost faith in trees

RISING FROM THE GRAVE.

An Incident Which Relieved the Monot-ony of Camp Life. When I was in the army during the winter of 1862 we were camped at the upper end of Metairie ridge, some few miles back of Carrollton, La., and some seven or eight from New Orleans. Toward Lake Pontchartrain there was an almost impassable cypress swamp and on the river side wet sloughs. The ridge was from a quarter to a half a mile in width and thickly settled. For what purpose we had been camped there we never knew, unless to try our constitutions in the very hot-bed of malarial production. The men were giving way very fast, so that it was impossible to make out a picket detail without taking men on the sick list.

Just where our regiment was camped the ridge was divided by a bayou, and back of us, across this bayou, was camped probably a thousand contrabands. The blacks were suffering from fevers and other sickness and dying off very fast, although they were thoroughly acclimated under ordinary circumstances. Our picket line was stationed just back of the contraband camp in the edge of the swamp, but what was expected to come through this morass, except alligators and other indigenous animals, is more than camped probably a thousand contraother indigenous animals, is more than we ever found out. Near the post occupying the northwest corner the con-

Is not a more tenacious monster than malaria, whether it takes the form of chills and fever, bilious remittant, ague cake or dumb ague. Like the octopus of the story it clasps the victim in its tentacuke, and folds him sloser and closer in a horrible embrace. Attacked with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, however, it gradients at last, rejoices in the sense of new born freedom, and greatest its tremendous grip, finally abandons it, and the quondam sufferer, liberated at last, rejoices in the sense of new born freedom, engendered by the restoration of complete health. Dyspepsia, too, and constipation, those old and remorseless enemies of the human family, give ground, and are finally pharmacopois. Rheumatism succumbs to it, so do kidney troubles. The nerves, when overstrained, regain quietude and vigor by its aid, and the ability to rest tranquilly and eat with zest are increased by it. Resort to it in time and avoid numecessary suffering.
