THE HERALD.

THURSDAY, MARCH 27, 1890.

Miss Braddon (Mrs. Maxwell) is fifty-three years old and has written fifty novels. Her novels have afforded intellectual amusement to thousands of admiring readers, and it is a pleasure to know the gifted Englishwoman is in easy and comfortable circumstances.—Ex.

National Democrat: Speaker Reed is getting lots of bad pictures of himself from the comic artists. Puck depicts him as a huge gorilla running off with a beautiful young woman who represents the rights of the minority, while in Judge he appears as a stalwart tamer of wild animals at whose feet the tiger (democracy) is abjectly crouching.

Washington Democrat: The Republican Philadelphia Telegraph hopes Mr. Cleveland will be nominated by Democrats in 1892, because, in that case, if Republicans should be beaten—which, of course, it treats as wildly improbable—"the Evening Telegraph, in connection with the entire country, would have the satisfaction of knowing that a man of single ability in statecraft, as in other things, a man of strong convictions, with the absolute courage to maintain them, a man honorable, patriotic and sincere, would be the Chief Magistrate of his country for another four years."

One of our Coast exchanges gets off the following "prediction:"

A friend of ours has made up a slate for the next campaign, and predicts its success. Here it is.

Congress, B. Hermann.
Governor, D. P. Thompson.
Secretary State, G. W. McBride.
State Treasurer, Tom Wright, of Union county.
State Printer, F. C. Barker.
Supt. Pub. Inst., E. B. McElroy.

"A friend of ours" in the newspaper office is very much the same to the candidate that introduces himself to the voters at the solicitation of "many friends."

Albany Democrat: We are evidently pretty well corralled here at Albany, for there are no trains from the north, none from the south, none from the west and none from the east, and the wires are all down all around. France may have whipped Germany, New York may be entirely burned, Nellie Bly and Miss Bisland may have fought a duel, the tariff may have been reduced, Bob Ingersoll may have been converted Coney Island may have been swallowed by a sea serpent; but we are none the wiser. It is a great aggravation to sit here corralled for certain and think of the great event that may be transpiring without our knowledge.

National Democrat: A subscriber in Grossbeck, Tex., writes us: "Mrs. Sue. I. Johnson, for two years postmistress here, has been turned out to give room for Alonzo Steele, a Republican applicant for the place. Mrs. Johnson has discharged the duties of the office to the satisfaction of everybody. What makes it worse is the fact that she has an entirely helpless family to support and were dependent on the income of the office, which was about $700. Steele during Hayes's administration was "turned out" himself on a charge of embezzlement. There are very few white Republicans in the county, and Steele's supporters are few. However, he has a brother-in-law by the name of Glass in Washington D. C. whose "influence" secured him a place at the "crib."

Professor W. C. Kitchin Ph. D., of Cambridge, has written a picturesque and vivid historical novel entitled "The Fall of the Christians," which is running in the New York Ledger. The religious and the historical elements are dominant in the work, and in narrating the overthrow of Christianity in Japan in the seventeenth century, the author has entered a field fresh to English literature. "The Fall of the Christians" is written by a scholar who has made a specialty of Japanese history, and is based on manuscripts which have been discovered by the author while he was occupying a distinguished scholastic position in Japan.

In the opening chapters of this story the terrible struggle between the Christains and their implacable foes, the Japanese Pagans, in the distant and unfamiliar days, when England, Holland and Portugal competed for supremacy in commerce with Japan, is described with clearness, power, and picturesque skill. In fact, the author has made the most of a fresh theme and fresh setting.

Marion Harland, the friend and helper of woman everywhere, has taken up the work of restoring the ruined monument marking the burial-place of Mary the Mother of Washington.

One hundred years ago this venerable woman was interred in private ground near Fredericksburg, Virginia. In 1827, the corner-stone of an imposing memorial was laid by President Andrew Jackson. A patriotic citizen of New York assumed the pious task, single-handed, but meeting with financial disaster, was compelled to abandoned.

Marion Harland says truly in her appeal to the mothers and daughters of America to erect a fitting monument to her who gave Our Country a Father—that "the silence spoke to sadder ruin in the length and breadth of our land than the unfinished structure."

The publishers of The Home-maker, of which Marion Harland is the editor, offer, as their contribution to the good cause, seventy-five cents out of every annual subscription of two dollars to the Magazine sent in during the next six months. Every such subscription must be accompanied by the words, "For Mary Washington Monument."

The offer is generous and should meet with an enthusiastic response.

Many of the villagers on the Upper Congo consists merely of fifty to sixty log-huts, two-thirds of the population being generally women. In many districts women are considered as currency, their value increasing as they attain a great degree of corpulency. Each woman has as many metal ornaments as she can wear, some composed of iron, others brass, and copper. These metals are the money of the country, so that the more a woman can heap upon herself the greater becomes her value. Each chief has as many wives as he can afford to buy or marry, which is only another form of purchase. Early in the morning few of these women are to be found in these villages, as they start off at daybreak to work in their plantations and do not return until about noon. However, a few always have to remain to attend to the necessary domestic items of life such as cooking and their toilet. These Central Africans are very particular in all items in connection with their toilet, which consists of plaiting their hair, shaving off the eyebrows, pulling out the eyelashes, cutting their nails right down to the quick and besmearing their bodies with a mixture of palm oil and camwood.—Scribner.

A couple of duck-legged dudes got into a Brook street car the other day and broke the rules of the company and insulted ladies in the car by filling it with the filthy fumes of cigarette smoke. An old negro woman, carrying a bundle, got into the car at Second street and was about to take her seat, when she looked around and eyeing the dudes for a minute, fanned the smoke away from in front of her face with her open hand and said: "Say little boys, ef you'll tro' dem ar weeds away yer suckin', I'd gin yer er a dime ter buy cigars; dey makes me feel sick at de stummick an' I'd rudder ride than walk." The "little boys" didn't take the dime, but they took the hint, pulled the strap, stopped the car and got out. "Fum white folks' chillen don't know nuffin," said the old woman, and the car moved on.—S. F. Examiner.

Re Didn't Advertise.

A nervous looking man went in to a store the other day and sat down for half an hour or so, when the clerk asked him if she could do anything for him. He said no; he didn't want anything. She went away and he sat there half an hour longer, when the proprietor went to him and asked him if he wanted to be shown anything. "No," said the nervous man. "I just want to sit around. My physician has recommended perfect quiet for me, and says above all thing, I should avoid being in crowds. Noticing that you did not advertise in the newspapers, I thought this would be as quiet a place as I could find so I just dropped in for a few hours' isolation." The merchant picked up a bolt of paper cambric to train him, but the man went out. He said all he wanted was a quiet life.—Puck's Cub.

PRINTERS' INK.
A JOURNAL FOR ADVERTISERS.
It issued on the first and fifteenth days of each month, and is the representative journal—the trade journal of American advertisers. It indicates to the inexperienced advertiser how, when, and where he should advertise; how to write an advertisement; how to display one; what newspapers to use; how much money to expend—in fact, discourses on every point that admits of profitable discussion. Advertising is an art practised by many but understood by few. The conductors of PRINTERS' INK understand it, and their advice is based on an experience of more than twenty-five years in placing advertising contracts for many of the largest and most successful advertisers. A year's subscription costs but One Dollar; sample copies Free. Address:—

Bro. Lee. "Why, Addie, you couldn't support me if I only could get him. You was a very well-behaved woman, for I believe you could follow her example."
Bro. L.—"Yes, and how much you said you wished I could take after Alonzo Allen.—and the time you and Alonzo Allen used to meet at the old Mission."
Bro. L.—"Yes, and I have got all of her information from Tax Payer as to my return. I admit that she knows all that is true, and I could do as well as she does if I had the same source of information. But I can't get the last number of Lippincott's and I intend to give one hour's time to-day to reading it. Addie and the young folks of the family will look after my interests every day, from the news of the day to the latest debate or discussion. Good-bye, dear Lee, remember me kindly to your wife and children, and tell her I will write her a letter soon. Mr. Allen wants to go to Europe and Mr. Allen wants to do it. It is really wonderful how it suits every member of the family."
Mr. Lee.—"Now, girls, I'll tell you what you say, a subscription to the Home-maker, the whole of us."
Miss Lee.—"I shall write to Jennings Demorest, the publisher, 15 East 14th street, New York, to offer us a Premium Copy for 10 cents, so we can't lose anything. Or if sending the dollar to any Fashion Order suits me any sooner—which alone makes each copy worth the cents—and I just want a pattern to cut this Mrs. Jarvis' Tax Payer is only 10 cents a year, and I intend to get it. I don't see how they can publish so Elegant a Magazine for so little money."

One of the BEST in the world. Our advertisement appears in this paper. Our readers are superior people we will endeavor to send them to each locality, to act as our agents. Only those who mean business need apply. Sure to clear over $100 each month. Some of the shrewdest men in America are employed as agents to show our goods to those who call—your neighbors and those around you. The benefits of this advertisement shows the small cost of the subscription. The following can prove the expenditure of it reduced to a trifle.
Shoot the fellow's eye out of his head. It is a grand, double size telescope, as large as a cane (3 feet). You will also have your new cane made from $3.50 to $10 or at least, from the finest, white ash selected. Better write at once. We pay all express charges. Address, H. HOME AND FARM,
LOUISVILLE, KY.
The Leading Agriculture Journal of the South and West.
Made by Farmers for Farmers.
As a record of successful agriculture, HOME AND FARM has no equal. Every topic relating to agriculture is openly discussed in its columns by the farmers themselves. No expense is spared in securing a full account of every notable success on the farm. It is distinctively the FARMERS' OWN PAPER.
A record of their daily life, presented in a form and language which make it plain to all.
ITS LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS
Contains the names of the most successful farmers of the south and West. They do not treat of theoretical farming, but of the actual conditions which confront us to-day. B. F. Johnson; Waldo F. Brown; Henry Stewart; John M. Small; A. F. Ford; Jeff. Bowers; Hugh T. Brooks; John C. Edgar; Steele's Boys; T. F. Hobbs, and a host of others make the journal indispensable. Moreover, it is equally
A HOME MAGAZINE.
Every subject of interest to the home-maker is fully treated. Mary Melrodes, Lois Cressey, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Dawkins, Miss Cabell, Miss Mosby, Alice Winston and a score of others will contribute regularly.
FAITH LATHROP
Is in charge of our Children's Department, and she has the peculiar faculty of being both interesting and instructive.
THE MYSTERY OF THE SUTTON
Is a thrilling story appearing in HOME AND FARM, by John E. Rusick, and is exciting with attention. Short stories by distinguished writers appear from time to time.
BILL ARP'S LETTERS
Appear in each issue, and this humorous philosopher was never more interesting than at this time.
IS ITS EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT
HOME AND FARM speaks boldly and fearlessly in behalf of "Farmers' Rights." It favors a revision of the tariff in behalf of the farmer; better trade for the farmer; Free Mail Delivery to the farmer; Cooperation among the farmers, and in fact is for "Farmers' Rights" in general.
"Fair Trade and Farmers' Rights."
