NEWSPAPER LAWS.

A postmaster is required to give notice by letter (returning the paper does not answer the law), when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the office, and the reason for his not being taken. Any neglect to do so makes the postmaster responsible to the publisher for payment. If any person orders his paper (except through the mail) he is liable for the whole amount until payment is made, and collect the whole amount whether it is taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until payment is made. If a subscriber orders his paper stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the postoffice. This proceeds on the ground that a man must pay for what he takes. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post office, or leaving them uncollected for, without paying for the same, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

CLIPPINGS FROM OUR EXCHANGES.

Prince George Frederick Earnest Albert, of Wales, will certainly visit the United States this summer.

Pelilo, the Indian convicted of the murder of the half breed woman on the Umatilla reservation, was hung, at Portland, June 6th.

At Belgrade, June 6th, the recent attack of Arnauts on a Servain village, on the frontier, proves to have been an unprovoked and brutal outrage. The inhabitants were driven out of their houses in the dead of night by a false alarm of fire. Out of the population of one hundred fifteen, were killed and thirty-five wounded. The murderous gang has not yet been apprehended.

At McMinnville, June 7th, the jury in the Scott murder trial have agreed on a verdict of manslaughter after being out all night. They stood nine for murder in the first degree and three for acquittal. A motion for a new trial is to be argued at two o'clock June 8th. The public looked upon the verdict as a compliment to the general good character of the Scott family, and the prevailing opinion was that the defense will not press the court for a new trial, and that Scott will get ten or fifteen years imprisonment, which is practically a life sentence, on account of the feeble condition of the old man.

A plague of owls has for two weeks disturbed the peace of John Mayer's home in the outskirts of Plainfield, N. J.

The first appearance of the feathered disturbers was noticed by one of Mr. Mayer's sons, who, in romping around the barn, discovered a snug nest of the young birds. There were no larger owls in sight, and the boy made one of the owlets a captive and carried it to the house. His mother compelled him to return it to the nest. He had no sooner placed it with the others than one of the older birds appeared, and attacked him furiously, beating him in the face with its wings and scratching with its claws and bill at his eyes. Shielding himself with his arm, the lad ran away and the owl left him at the barn door. That afternoon one of the young ladies of the family had occasion to visit the carriage-house, when a great owl flew down and alighted on her back; she shook it off with difficulty, and in the struggle had her garments torn. Since then the owls have taken complete possession of the out-buildings and their surroundings. Scores of the birds, which are of the day owl species, have followed the first comers, and have made their nest in the barn. Several have been killed, but this seems to make the others more fierce. Even men dare not venture near the nesting-places without masks and other protection. A novel defense of umbrellas has at last been adopted, and now when any member of the Mayer family wishes to visit the owls' castle, he holds a parachute over his head. Already three umbrellas have been ruined by the birds dashing against them in a vain endeavor to reach the faces of the carriers. The Mayer family are in a state of mind. They don't want to move out, but they can't dispossess their unwelcome and belligerent tenants; and although the owls are said to be of the day sort they have a most uncomfortable habit of making the night hideous. They keep up a hoating which would have made noise-proof Napoleon Bonaparte get up and swear.—S. F. Examiner.

A Submarine Wonder.
The new torpedo boat, Le Goubet made another successive trip, at Paris, June 7. On her first trial she sank slowly in the water and moved just beneath the surface with perfect precision to where five torpedo boats were anchored side by side. At this point the vessel passed promptly under the torpedo boats, and then returned to the surface and to her original moorings, after touching a steamer, supposed for the occasion to represent a torpedo depot. The emersion lasted 45 minutes.

The trip last taken was more successful. The Goubet was immersed for sixty minutes, making a series of evolutions and showing perfect subjection to the control of her pilots.

Hard at Work.
Nearly one hundred eminent persons are now engaged in preparing valuable and important contributions to the Youth's Companion for 1890.

Mr. Gladstone is getting together his reminiscences of Motley, the Historian; Justin McCarthy is writing all his personal recollection of Prime Ministers; Captain Kennedy is recalling the exciting episodes of his five hundred different trips across the Atlantic, and making notes for his articles; General Wolsey is arranging how to tell the boys how they can endure hardships; Carrol D. Wright is securing statistics about the boy and girl laborers of America, what they do and what they earn; Hon. James G. Blaine is writing a paper for our young politicians; popular authors are at work on serial stories; the presidents of three leading American colleges will give good advice to boys on their future; Tyndall and Shaler are to talk about the wonders of nature; Marion Harland promises to entertain the girls, while Lieutenant Schwatka will take the boys in imagination to the loneliest place in the United States.

There are hundreds of pleasures in store for The Companion readers of 1890. Every one is hard at work as you see. $1.75 will admit you to 52 weeks of these entertainments. Send for Full Prospectus for 1890 to The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass.

Radicals Disappointed.
Lee's Statue Unveiling was neither Democratic nor a Blunder.

National Democrat: The Cincinnati Commercial Gazette reprints the following piece of stupidity from the St. Louis Democrat: "The Confederate jubilee at Richmond was the largest Democratic blunder of the present year."

The ceremonies attending the unveiling of the statue of Gen. Lee had no more to do with the Democratic party than an Orange procession. A large number of the Confederates of 30 years ago were Democrats, but a great many of them were Whigs, the party out of which the Republican party evolved.

But without going into ancient history it is transparent enough that the Richmond celebration had no connection with the Democratic party. The most conspicuous man at the Lee unveiling was General Longstreet, a Republican, who has held office under every Republican President but the present one. Colonel Dan Grosvenor told Gen. H. V. Boynton of one incident he observed: "Many of the old veterans broke ranks and shook hands with Longstreet, and not infrequently they would actually embrace him, and even wept upon his neck."

"The cheering was something prodigious when Longstreet, the veteran lieutenant of Lee, was recognized by the Richmond populace. From the beginning to the end of the march Longstreet's progress was an ovation. This fact should end the clamor of the ignorant partisans who endeavor to associate political significance with the doings of the day.

The address of Col. Anderson is admitted by the most radical Republicans to have been patriotic and in excellent taste. The United States flag was conspicuous in the decorations and was carried by a number of commands in the procession though the occasion was not a national one, any more than a Knight Templar convale, or a scientific celebration would be.

General H. V. Boynton, in the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, quotes one of the most radical of the most radical of the correspondents who went to Richmond, as saying:

"There has been much exaggeration concerning the display of the rebel flags at Richmond. It is true the rebel battle flag was conspicuous throughout the city, but the American flag—the flag of the Union—was likewise everywhere. The stars and bars, the official flag of the Confederacy, was seldom seen. I saw hundreds of houses decorated solely with the Union flag, but a majority of the decorations all over the city included both the Union flag and the Confederate battle flag. The Mississippi veterans in the parade carried the stars and stripes at the head of their column, and they were cheered as heartily and as often as any others. The Texans also carried it in their line. It was most natural that the old veterans who followed the misfortunes of the Confederacy for four years should hold dear the memories of the banner under which they fought, and they may be pardoned for the display of their old battle flag upon such an occasion. But they did not flaunt it with any spirit of disloyalty, but rather with reverence for the sad memories associated with it. Those who fought for the Confederacy are now enthusiastic Unionists, with the exception of an occasional crazy old fanatic like Rosser or Jubal Early, who will never be reconstructed in this world."

The truth is, the good sense and patriotism displayed in Richmond, May 29, proved a great disappointment to a large section of the Republican press who wanted as much as possible of what they call the "rebel yell" in order to "fire the hearts" of the Northern people for the approaching Congressional elections.

Who was Cain's Wife.
I desire to say something to those who seem to be anxious to know who Cain's wife was. I have often been asked who was Cain's wife. There are many persons who are puzzled about it, not necessary that they should be. But they are all the same. I wish to tell such persons how they can know who she was. I only know through the testimony found in the Scriptures that there ever was such a man as Cain, and that he ever had a wife. If we reject the testimony found in the Scriptures concerning him and his wife, we then know nothing of either of them. We are shut up then in the very nature of the case to what the Bible says about them for all we can know about it. Now what does the Bible say? In Gen. 4th chapter and 7th verse, we learn of the birth of Cain, the first son of Adam, and Eve, his wife. In the same chapter we read of the birth of two more sons of Adam, and Eve his wife, named Abel and Seth. In the 4th verse of the 3d chapter we read that Adam begot sons and daughters. In 20th verse of 5th chapter we read, "Adam called his wife's name Eve, because she was the mother of all living." Of this wife, Eve, then, was born to Adam sons and daughters, all living men and women.

Did Cain have a wife? Yes. Who was she? A daughter of Eve. Why did he marry her? See the 7th chapter of Gen. 27th and 28th verses. Could he marry any other woman but a daughter of Eve? No. Why not? Because there was no such woman. How do you know that there was not another woman? The Bible says that "Eve was the mother of all living." Well did not Cain find a woman, or a something, for a wife in the land of Nod? No. How do you know he did not? I have two ways of knowing it. How do you know, or why do you think he did find a wife in the land of Nod? There is no evidence of such a thing. The Bible says Eve was the "mother of all living," and the meaning of the word land of Nod is a place uninhabited. Then as there was no inhabitants in the land of Nod, and no women anywhere else, but a daughter of Eve, for Cain to get for a wife, we know that Cain's was a daughter of Eve. But some one says, "may be his wife was not a woman?" Why suppose such a thing, sir? Could not Cain get a wife among the daughters of Eve, as easily as his younger brothers? When did they find wives? I have said enough to show how we may know who Cain's wife was. She was a woman, and a daughter of Adam and Eve.
