Run Over by a Train.

ALBANY, Or., April 27—As the overland south bound train last night was approaching the station of Tangent, seven miles south of here, a man was seen standing close beside the track. He did not get out of the way, and was struck and killed by the engine. The engineer thought the man got in the way of the engine purposely, with suicidal intent, but later indications show that he probably intended to board the train. He was struck by the guard rail of the engine on the left side of the head, breaking his skull and killing him instantly. His body was brought to the city this morning. Letters upon his person showed his name to be W. D. Bauff, and that he has a family in Victoria, Tenn. A telegram notifying them of the accident has been sent. The unfortunate man was a member of the order of Knights of Pythias, by which order he will be buried here, unless directions to the contrary are received from the family. He was clean shaven, moderately well dressed, and did not seem to be a tramp, although he had no money.—Times-Mirror

General's Generosity.

When the lady entered the room he rose from his chair and said: "You have a room to rent, I believe?" "Yes, sir; front room on the second floor," she replied. "Are you one of the gentlemen who advertised for a room with board?" "I'm one of the men who advertised for a fair sized room well lighted." "One of the men?" "Yes, ma'am." "How did your advertisement read?" "Oh, just said, 'a business man desires a fair sized room, with board within a mile of the business part of the city.'" "The advertisement read a 'man'?" "Certainly." "Not a 'refined gentleman'?" "No, indeed." "Well, I'll take a few dollars off the price, then. I've been looking for a man. I'm rather tired of 'refined gentlemen.' They generally play poker all night and leave without paying their bills.—Tribune.

Alger's Generosity.

Mr. Sayles, a gentleman from Detroit, relates this anecdote of General Alger's generosity: Three years before General Paul Sheridan's death he was persuaded by General R. A. Alger to be examined for a $50,000 life insurance policy. "The man had just been married," said he, "and had a child, and declared he could not pay the premiums. General Alger said he could arrange the first three years with the company, as they liked to use names of prominent persons to advertise their benefits. Then he quietly went around to the company's office and paid the premiums for three years himself. That made the policy good for $50,000 for that period, and good for something on the basis of the three years' premiums even if Sheridan never paid any more. Sheridan died before the three years were up and his widow got the money."—Record.

Mistakes.

Martin he's a dandy, He never does get drunk On either wine or brandy. But takes water from the pump. He wouldn't have a demijohn, No matter large or small Unless the chance to smuggle it, And hide it from us all. You should have heard the language, That he used upon the mill. When the smuggled demijohn was uncorked And passed to Uncle Bill. Poor Mart he couldn't believe it, Said Bill was off the track, But Bill said Mart take some Then pass it over to Zach. They all pronounced it water, Said Mart he couldn't see, But Bill remarked some one fixed it just right for "you" and "me." Then Martin was very angry To think he had been sold, by purchasing a demijohn With water in it, cold. Oh Lord! You should have seen him kick himself, And tremble in his boots, Says he: Oh my! I'll catch it From Tom and Isaac both. You should not mind the joke Mart out take it as your due, And remember when you were plotting Mart Two men and a woman were against you. Bill said to Mart now never mind, For I possess some sherry, Said he to one going out And we will drink to Mary. The bottle was brought and passed around And Mart bellowed out that's jolly, Then one said Oh! another my! And Zach he said O golly! You see they through a mistake Bought wine instead of sherry, But did not know till all had drunk The difference in theerry. Mart said the next day noon "Between the drug and water, Its brought me round in fine old style And hoped that all were better."—"SPOOKS."
