Pa-Rockefeller Objected.

CLEVELAND, July 21.—The wealthy and fashionable Euclid Avenue Baptist church is stirred from centre to circumference by a first class sensation. A month ago the Rev. L. A. Crandall, D. D., the pastor, very suddenly and unexpectedly resigned his pastorate. Everything in the church indicated prosperity and harmony, and when Dr. Crandall accepted a Chicago pastorate it seemed strange and unreasonable.

It has since developed that the real cause of Dr. Crandall's resignation was the declaration to him by John D. Rockefeller, the most influential member of the church, that either the doctor must resign or Mr. Rockefeller and his family would leave the church. It all came from the strange infatuation of Miss Alta, the second daughter of Mr. Rockefeller, for the family's pastor.

Mr. Crandall is a widower with two children who have almost reached manhood and womanhood. His wife died a year ago last April, and since that time, at every opportunity, Miss Rockefeller, who is a comely young lady of 22, has manifested her infatuation. She wrote a large number of letters to Dr. Crandall and deluged him with protestations of her love and devotion. So far as is known the minister did nothing to encourage the young lady, but in every possible way discouraged her attentions. She persisted, however, and, it is said, with how much truth cannot be ascertained, that he had at last become convinced of her attachment for him and, esteeming her very highly for many loving and admirable qualities, proposed marriage.

However this may be, Mr. Rockefeller was very angry when the matter came to his attention, and not only forbade the marriage between his 22-year-old daughter and her pastor, 25 years her senior, because of the disparity in their ages, but he gave Mr. Crandall the ultimatum stated above. Rather than injure the church, Mr. Crandall secured another charge as quickly as possible and resigned.

The sultan of Keddah, in the Malay peninsula, has a remarkable method of carrying out the sentence of death upon condemned convicts. It is doubtful if this method of execution is practiced in any other part of the world. The sultan is the ruler of a country containing about 60,000 people.

On the morning of the day fixed for the execution the sultan, followed by his ministers, goes about a mile and a half from the place to a vacant space reserved for the execution of criminals. Nothing can be seen in this place except the graves of the condemned, and a large tree which is called the tree of execution. The sultan takes his seat in a chair at the foot of the tree, while his ministers group themselves around him on the ground. Then the condemned man is brought forward and is made to kneel at a distance of about forty feet. His arms are tied behind his back and he is naked to the waist.

The executioner places upon the left shoulder of the condemned man a piece of cotton cloth. He then takes in his hands the lance of justice, which is very richly ornamented with silver, puts the point upon the man's left shoulder and grasps the handle firmly with both hands. When these preparations are made he looks at the sultan, who is holding the sword of justice in his lap. The sultan suddenly raises his hand, and this is the signal for the fatal blow.

At this moment the executioner, who is always a Hercules in strength with one vigorous blow drives the lance through the man's shoulder and into his heart. He dies as quickly as though he had been shot through the heart, and probably is not conscious of suffering any pain. The executioner then withdraws the weapon, and stanches the small amount of blood flowing from the wound with a cotton cloth, in conformity with the rules of Islam. Usually the body of the victim is turned over to his family, who purify it by ablutions and hold elaborate funeral ceremonies. A recent witness says, in his opinion, the spectacle is not near as revolting as that of some other methods of inflicting capital punishment.

Behring Sea Arbitration.

PARIS, July 20.—President Carnot's appointment of Baron Courcel who is senator, and who was formerly French ambassador to Berlin, as arbitrator in the Behring sea affair is an excellent one. The baron has a host of sincere friends in the diplomatic world, and during his residence in Berlin he has proved that he was able to bring difficult negotiations to a successful issue. Moreover, he speaks English well, which is an essential condition, as the United States and Great Britain have claimed from the start, as a matter of right, that discussion should be held in English. The French, on the other hand, maintained that discussion should be carried on in French language. Finally it was decided that English should be spoken during the discussions, and that the protocols and the decisions should be drawn up in French. After that it will be officially translated into English. The arbitration will begin in next October.

A Ship Canal Across Ireland.

LONDON, July 19.—The Times gives prominence to a letter from Sir Edward Watkin, liberal unionist, member-elect of the house of commons for Hythe, and chairman of the Southeastern Railway Company, urging a settlement of the Irish question by a compromise between Gladstone and Salisbury, and by construction of a ship canal across Ireland and a tunnel connecting Ireland and Scotland. The construction of the ship canal, Sir Edward says, would place Ireland on the shortest sea route to all the great West and to the East by way of the Canadian Pacific railway. Surveys, he adds, show the project is feasible, and that the cost would not exceed £20,000,000. Sir Edward further says the construction of a ship canal and tunnel would restore prosperity to Ireland by affording work for thousands of men and by the impetus that would be added to the present commercial industries and the creation of new ones.

Will remain at Homestead.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., July 20.—General George R. Snowden, commanding the troops gathered in and about Homestead made this announcement today: "I desire to state that the entire division of the National Guard now at Homestead will remain here intact until the present difficulties between the Carnegie company and its employes are finally adjusted. I have no qualifications to make to this announcement. Not one company of this division will be ordered home until a complete settlement is reached. Furthermore, I desire to officially announce that the First brigade has been ordered to report at once at Homestead." Ten minutes later Governor Pattison was interviewed but declined to talk for publication.

Jekyl-Hyde Case.

LEXINGTON, Ky., July 19.—I. Y. Smith, aged 46 a deacon of the Broadway Christian Church and a director of the Hamilton female college, as well as treasurer of the Christian educational fund, has left his wife and five children and is now in Tennessee with a woman with whom he has been infatuated for years. He sent his wife a letter yesterday saying he had left Kentucky forever. He has been leading a double life for 15 years, and has spent most of the $40,000 his father left him on this woman; at the same time he has been, to all outward appearances, a most exemplary church man.

Killed by a Foil.

FALL RIVER MASS., July 19.—Dr. C. C. Terry, a well known physician of this city, was killed last night while taking lessons in fencing from Professor Castaldi of Newport. The button on the latter's foil broke and the weapon, passing through mask, penetrated Terry's eye into his brain. The doctor remained unconscious for some time, but when he revived coolly made a diagnosis of his own case as rupture of the brain, realized that death was near, and assured his instructor that he felt no malice for the fatal blow. Castaldi is almost insane from grief.

It should be understood that the high fence that encloses the whole territory occupied by the Homestead plant comes down to the river on each side of the grounds, and projects into the water several feet. Between these points is a steamboat landing entirely within the ground owned by the company, and it was here that the Tide proposed to and did land her two barges with their freight and Pinkerton guards. And it was here that the battle of Homestead Mills was fought.

Not a bit of it:—"The spectacle of Andrew Carnegie, living in palatial splendor and court magnificence in his castle in the Scotch Highlands, and from there issuing his orders and instruction, as general in chief, in the war which his grun at Pittsburg has instituted against American wage-earners, is exasperating enough to precipitate scenes of violence, and inaugurate deeds of bloodshed."—It's in strict accord with the Pennsylvania policy of protecting other people, and letting their own go to the dogs.
