DR. MILES' MEDICAL CO., ELKHART, IND.
 You will remember the condition I was in five years ago, when I was afflicted with a combination of diseases, and thought there was no relief to be had. I tried all kinds of medicines, and scores of eminent physicians. My nerves were prostrated, producing dizziness, heart trouble and all the ills that make life miserable. I commenced to take DR. MILES' NERVINE and in three months I was perfectly cured. In my travels each year, when I see the thousands of physical wrecks, suffering from nervous prostration, taking prescriptions from local physicians who have no knowledge of their case, and whose death is certain, I feel like going to them and saying, "Get DR. MILES' NERVINE and be cured." In my profession, where there are so many such cases, I have never known a case of nervous exhaustion, brought on by the character of the business engaged in, I would recommend DR. MILES' NERVINE as a sure cure for all suffering from these causes. JAMES R. WAITE.

Sold on a Positive Guarantee.

A Country Schoolmistress.
 From The Family Story Paper.
CHAPTER I.

She shut the door of the little country schoolhouse, and turned the key in the lock. The wild roses were blooming all along the roadside, and the robins were singing in the tullems over her head.

Away in the west the sun was going down in a blaze of glory, and the distant spires of the village churches shone like gold in the luminous light.

It was a quiet country scene, and Leslie March sighed as she reflected that this was the last time she was likely to gaze upon it for many a day—perhaps never again. And she had been so happy and contented here at Pine Ridge. For almost two years she had taught the school in the red schoolhouse, and now she was locking the door for the last time.

The pay had been small, but it had been sufficient for her simple wants, and it had kept her from being dependent on her aunt Hargrove. And if there was any one thing she dreaded, it was being obliged to owe anything to Margaret Hargrove.

When Leslie's mother was on her deathbed she had sent for Mrs. Hargrove, and asked her, by the memory of the love they had borne each other in the old days, when they were children together, to care for her little Leslie, so soon to be left alone in the world. Mrs. Hargrove had coldly promised that Leslie should not suffer, and had added a heartless remark to the effect that if Robert March had done as he ought to have done, his child would not now be an object of charity.

And the pallid cheek of the dying woman had glowed with a hot crimson, for she had loved Robert March truly and tenderly, and when he had died by his own hand, she had lost her hold on life, and faded away like a frost blighted flower.

John Hargrove and Robert March had been partners in business, and lifelong friends.

Their attachment for each other had been deep and sincere, and when it was discovered that there had been a defalcation in the bank in which they were both the principal managers, and the stockholders had come down upon them, and the law had threatened them, March had taken his own life, and Hargrove's innocence was thereby established.

He had prospered, and grown immensely rich, but he was a more rose and silent man, and there were people who said that his conscience troubled him, and that all was not as the world thought it was. That old affair which had cost his friend and partner his life and his good name.

Leslie had found a home, such as it was, with the Hargroves, after her mother's death; but the two daughters, Helens and Louise, slighted her on every occasion, and she was glad to accept the position of schoolmistress at Pine Ridge, which had been obtained for her by an old friend of her father.

She had given universal satisfaction, but one of the sisters of the supervisor wanted the place, and Leslie had been dismissed.

As she walked along the quiet country road to her boarding place at Mrs. Patson's, she was wondering what she should do to avoid going back to her aunt's.

Her fair brow was wrinkled up in a frown, she had pushed her hat back, and left her bronze gold hair to toss in the soft breeze, her blue eyes were troubled, and her sweet mouth was full of perplexity.

She made so fair and striking a picture that young Dr. Huntleigh looked twice at her as he met her, and checked the pace of his big roan horse to look back at her.

He allowed the horse to walk through the willow bordered road, and he glanced back a second time at the slight figure in the pink dress, and he said to himself:

"It must be the little schoolmistress at Pine Ridge. A sweet face she has, and of whom does she so strongly remind me? By Jove! it is Helena, only this girl's face is sweet, and Helena's is proud, and a little scornful. I wonder if I really love Helena Hargrove? I am ashamed of myself for dilly dallying if indeed I am doing so; but, upon my soul, I do not know if I want her for a wife or not."

"She would make a fair and stately mistress for Huntleigh Hall, and it would please my mother; but, somehow, when I am away from her I doubt her, and I cannot overcome the feeling. Well, thank Heaven! I have not yet committed myself."

"Get up there, Victor!" and the handsome young doctor touched his horse with the whip and disappeared over the hill in a cloud of dust.

Two hours later he was called to Mrs. Patson's. That good lady had been up on the haymow after a "broody" hen, and had made a misstep and fallen, and the result was a broken arm.

DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A BABY?

Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application; it has been done before, however, but never have those furnished been so near the original as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well, that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black and white engraving conveys you but a faint idea of the exquisite original.

"I'M A BABY."

which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The little darling rests against a pillow, and is in the act of drawing off its pink sock, the mate of which has been pulled off and hung aside with a triumphant flourish. The 5 inch distance perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of the artist are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be sold for less than 25 cents. The baby is the same size, 18 1/2 inches. The baby is in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures, such as that of Percy Farnham, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year. "A Yard of Paradise" and "A White House Rebel" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the facts and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing the interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the latest and most up-to-date fashions for the year, and in any way you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $4, and you will really get over $25 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York.
