A DESPERATE REVENGE.

It was an inclement night, but the gloomy looking man who stood in the doorway of the little town hall and looked out at the pelting rain did not blame it, entirely, on the weather.

The gloomy looking man was Webster Shukks, leading citizen and prominent debater of Bainbridge Township. He had come to Spiketown, pursuant to announcement, to deliver an address on "The Crime of '73," and only three persons had turned out, one of them being the janitor of the building.

The other two had heard the orator once or twice before.

It was decided to postpone the meeting. The light were put out and Mr. Shukks, buttoning his overcoat about him, turned up his collar, and pulling his hat brim down all around, went forth into the storm.

Oppressed by the burden of an unspoken speech, he wandered aimlessly about the little town for hours, regardless of the rain that soaked his garments and the mud that spattered and stopped as he wended his devious and uncertain way through streets, whose broad sidewalks and well built crossings were yet in the future. Eter thoughts of the apathy of the people he had come to enlighten surged through his mind, and at times he felt an almost irresistible impulse to let them slide on to their ruin without making any further effort to save them.

Finding himself at last opposite the village hotel, where he had engaged lodgings, for the night he went in. Climbing the stairs softly in order not to disturb the slumbers of the other guests, he proceeded to his room.

Through the partly opened door he saw a man slipping quietly about a dark lantern in his hand.

Webster Shukks grasped his heavy cane firmly, slipping noiselessly inside, shut the door behind him, and spoke in a low tone:

"Stop right where you are! If you make the slightest movement I'll brain you!"

Taken by surprise, the intruder threw up his hands.

"Now, you scoundrel," said the statesman of Bainbridge Township, with the same, low, tense utterance, "I don't know who you are or where you come from, but I know what you're prowling about my room for. You are here to steal something!"

"I—I—" began the baffled burglar.

"There is nothing you need say," interrupted Webster Shukks, with a gleam of vengeance in his eye. "Open your head again and I'll drive you down through the floor! Listen to me. We have met this evening, my fellow citizens, to consider as calmly as we can the great crime committed against the people of this country in the year 1873 at the bidding of an organization composed of a few London and

New York bankers—a crime so dastardly, so fiendish, so monstrous in its conception, and heartless in its execution that humanity may well stand appalled at the mere contemplation of it! Let us go back to the beginning! In 1792, my fellow citizens, congress passed a mint and coinage law by which gold and silver, when coined, were declared to be the primary money of the republic. The unit of value was the silver dollar of 371 1/4 grains of pure, or 416 grains of standard silver. The legal ratio was declared in this act to be, not otherwise provided for, 15 to 1. It was enacted that any person could take either of the two metals to the mint and have them coined into money, free of all charge. In its sovereign capacity, fellow citizens the founders of this great country laid down the broad principle of the free coinage of silver."

There was a hoarse, gurgling sound, and the helpless villain, who had been standing in a corner of the room with his hands above his head, sank in a heap to the floor.

Nature had come to his relief. He had fainted. —Chicago Tribune.

How to Prevent Croup.

Croup is a terror to young mothers and to post them concerning the cause, first symptoms and treatment is the object of this item. The origin of croup is a common cold. Children who are subject to it take cold very easily and croup is almost sure to follow. The first symptom is hoarseness; this is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough, which is easily recognized and will never be forgotten by one who has heard it. The time to act is when the child first becomes hoarse. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is freely given all tendency to croup will soon disappear. Even after the croupy cough has developed it will prevent the attack. There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains nothing injurious.
