

"DON'T THROW THAT BODY OVERBOARD"

Graham, the War Correspondent in His Great Book "SCHLEY AT SANTIAGO" Tells the Whole Truth.

Admiral Schley is threatened by his enemies, and the cause is attributed to George E. Graham, the War Correspondent, and his book—"Schley and Santiago."

This book contains an autograph letter of Schley's addressed to Graham, in which Admiral Sampson is by inference criticised for not having been present when the Spanish Fleet was destroyed.

What a horde of petty politicians are clamoring against Schley and for what reason?

Sampson's friends are afraid of the wonderful success of this new book of Graham's is meeting with. Why?

Because this book with its 500 pages of eloquent facts, and its fifty pages of actual photographs, so thoroughly refutes all the charges made in the first court-martial, and puts it entirely out of the question to start a second one, that the press antagonistic to Schley are turning heaven and earth to stop its sale and thus kill the wave of enthusiasm for Schley and his cause which is sweeping the country.

Mr. W. B. Conkey, the well known Chicago publisher, is keeping his great million dollar plant at Hammond busy night and day, and the mail orders that are coming in, each letter containing one dollar and fifty cents for each copy of this wonderful book, serve to keep a small army of clerks very busy.

Here is an anecdote taken at random from Graham's book. The Brooklyn was alone—"On our starboard side were the four Spanish vessels, each of them plainly in view and each of them firing. If Schley had given the slightest indication at that moment that he was afraid of the result, or if he had ordered the helm put over to take the Brooklyn out of the fight, it is perfectly possible that peace would have seized us all. But as cool as if he were saying he would join a pleasure cruise, Commodore Schley said to Cook all in the same breath, "Well, we are going to stay with them, keep her in toward them," and in the next instant, to Ellis, "Get that range, Ellis." Ellis stepped out from the shadow of the turret and took the range. "1,200 yards," he sang out and turned to step back.

The next moment his headless body dropped to the deck. A six-pound shell had knocked his head off. Two men were about to throw the body overboard, but Schley said quickly, "Don't throw that body overboard. Take it below and we'll give it Christian burial."

Schley's enemies must be right. He must be a coward and not a Christian.

WHO WON THE BATTLE OF SANTIAGO

Who Commanded the Fleet? Schley or Sampson? Three Ways Open to the President

What is President Roosevelt going to do with the Schley Appeal? Admiral Schley is slowly wending his way to Washington, will probably be there within a week or ten days, and it seems to be the general opinion that the President will render his decision when the Rear-Admiral returns from his western tour.

There are three ways open to the President to decide the appeal.

1. He may send the case back to the Navy Department, as having the sole jurisdiction, and make no other comment.

2. He may declare the appeal regular and also indorse the final action of Secretary Long.

3. He may declare the appeal regular and indorse some of the findings of the majority of the court and of its president, Admiral Dewey.

The fact that the President has accepted the appeal makes it reasonably certain that the conclusions arrived at by Secretary Long and the Navy Department are not conclusive.

It seems to be the President's duty to settle the controversy once and for all, so that Congress will not find it necessary to take action on the numerous bills now before it, and which are held in abeyance pending the White House decision.

The President has already decided that the Court had ample jurisdiction and power to pass on the question of absolute command. The Navy Department has always strenuously denied this.

It seems the President is opening a way to concur with Admiral Dewey, who maintained what the Navy Department denied, and who did in fact pass on the question of command.

If this was a suggestion from the White House, it is generally conceded the President was paving the way to concur with Admiral Dewey, who had maintained what the Navy Department denied, and who did, in fact, pass on the question of command.

There is therefore warrant for the belief that the President may agree with the majority of the court in non-essential which the court magnified into high crimes and misdemeanors, but that as to the essentials of who was actually in command, who won the great victory who issued the orders for the actual conflict, etc., the President will sustain the broad and non-partisan propositions laid down by Admiral Dewey.

The President was once Assistant Secretary of the Navy and is aware of the inner-workings in the bureau and army office which led to the "Schley controversy." He was on the board of strategy, and remembers, perhaps, a great many things which are generally supposed to be forgotten.

It may be further stated that the President is again reading George Graham's great book—"Schley and Santiago." He has once before expressed his opinion regarding it in the following words: "Mr. Graham's story is the best account I have heard or read of the naval fighting during the war. It need not just as much courage to go about taking photographs as it did to work the guns."

The book published by the W. B. Conkey Company of Chicago contains nearly 500 pages of facts and fifty photographs taken during the fight by Graham, the War Correspondent, which will give every patriotic citizen the opportunity to judge the controversy on its merits.

We have read the book—it's worth a dollar and fifty cents—yes more than that, because it is the only truthful and authentic account of the battle of Santiago.—Special from Commercial Aes'td Press.
