Says an exchange: A kiss is a peculiar proposition. Of no use to one, yet absolute bliss to two.

The small boy gets it for nothing, the young man has to steal it and the old man has to buy it.

The baby's right, the lover's privilege, the hypocrite's mask. To a young girl, faith; to a married woman, hope; to an old maid, charity.

A mother asked her little daughter the other day, "Where do good little girls go when they die?"

"To heaven of course." "Where do bad girls go?" "To the depot to see the traveling men come in," was the little tot's reply.

For a bilious attack take Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and a quick cure is certain.

Secretary of State Dunbar last Saturday made the annual apportionment of the United States 5 per cent land sales fund among the counties of the state. The apportionment is made upon the basis of acreage, so that, as a general rule, the least populous counties get the most of the money. Supreme Court Decision.

The following is among the decisions handed down by the Supreme Court this week:

Henrich Volp, appellant, vs. Board of Medical Examiners respondent, from Multnomah County. M. C. George, Judge, affirmed; opinion by Justice Wolverton.

On June 13, 1902, Volp applied to the State Board of Medical Examiners for an examination as to his qualification to receive a license to practice medicine and surgery. His examination proving unsatisfactory, the board issued to him what was intended to be a temporary license only or a permit to practice for six months in the following form: "This certifies that Henrich Volp, having passed a satisfactory examination in medicine and surgery before the Board of Medical Examiners, is hereby authorized under the provisions of the act to regulate the practice of medicine in the State of Oregon, passed by the legislature in February, 1889, to pursue the practice of medicine in this state under the conditions of aforesaid act, till December 13, 1891." On March 30, 1895, Volp presented this certificate, with the words and figures "till December 13, 1891" erased, to the secretary of the board, by whom it was recorded. On July 2, 1895, Volp filed the certificate in the office of the County Clerk of Multnomah County, and on July 7, 1897, secured a certified copy thereof, which he filed in the clerk's office in Harney County. On May 23, 1900, W. L. Marsden made complaint to the board, charging Volp with having fraudulently changed the certificate, and the board gave Volp notice through the mail that on January 4, 1901, the charge would be investigated. The board revoked the license, and Volp brought this mandamus suit to compel the board to reinstate him as a duly licensed physician. He was defeated in the lower court, whereupon he appealed.

He based his appeal upon two contentions—first, that the board being without authority to issue a temporary license, and having certified that the licentiate had passed a satisfactory examination and exercised its authority to license, it must be held to have exercised its powers legally and to have granted a full license; and, second, that the board was without jurisdiction to revoke the license, because proper and legal notice had not been served. Volp admitted making the erasure, and said he made it because the board had no right to issue a temporary license.

The Supreme Court holds that the board had no authority to issue a temporary license, and that the license it did issue was void. "The simple solution is that the board exceeded its authority in issuing the form of license adopted. It had no intention of issuing a regular license. The applicant had not come up to the prescribed standard under his examination, and, acting upon a generous impulse toward him, so that he might yet have an opportunity of qualifying himself, and in the meanwhile engage in his adopted profession, the board gave him the permit to practice for six months. To construe such an act into absolute regularity and the permit of six months' duration into a license, would be to contort an irregular and void proceeding into one of due regularity and perfect legal efficacy. His erasure cannot by any rule of ethics or practice, either in law or morals, operate to admit him as a regular practitioner of medicine and surgery; so that he has never been by any act of the board licensed generally to practice his profession, but by his own willful act he has procured the making up of a record which is false, and without the power of either the board or its clerks to make.
