

This 2015 hunting season Bobbee has one goal:
Bag a bull elk that's bigger than Brandon's.

“When he sent me the photo by phone, I said ‘No way!’” Bobbee recalled. “I couldn’t believe it. Later, he called and he was so excited about it.”

This 2015 hunting season Bobbee has one goal: Bag a bull elk bigger than Brandon’s.

Both of them also were lucky to draw buck tags going into the season. Typically, the chance of getting the tag is once every three years. For a bull, it’s once every four years. Needless to say, with bragging rights up for grabs, Brandon and Bobbee are excited and looking forward to the season ahead.

The couple lives in Canyon City with their three children: Gracee, 6; Paislee, 3; and Levi, 6 months. Both Brandon and Bobbee were born into families where hunting is a way of life going back generations. Hunting is a tradition the couple look to instill in their children, who will join them on hunting trips more often as they grow older, and one day possibly join into the family competition.

Brandon Hueckman with his prize bull he bagged in 2014. It is one of the biggest bulls killed in Grant County in recent history.