

ELK

Research at the Starkey Project is conducted by the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife and the U.S. Forest Service, and it started in 1989; the research will continue for 10 years.

Animals researched at the site include deer, elk and cattle, as well as smaller animals, and the land itself.

“Brian does a great job teaching the students,” Freeman said. “Teaching our students about the positive roles that cattle, elk and deer play in our lives here in Long Creek is an important part of education.”

For more information, visit The Starkey Project online at <http://www.fs.fed.us/pnw/starkey>.
