OUT OF THE PAST

A Real Need
 Prairie City is one of the few towns its size in the state that has no public reading room. Almost every little city has a room open to the public where good books, newspapers and periodicals are to be read by all who care to see them, and where books can be borrowed and read. To open such a place in Prairie would be comparatively easy if the matter were taken up by the right people. The initial cost could be met in various ways, and it has been found in other places that there are many people who own books that they have read, and are glad to donate to such a cause.

Staking a claim
 Simple as it may be there are those constantly asking how to stake a mining claim. A mining claim is 20 acres, 600 feet wide and 1,500 feet long. At the point of discovery, which is mineral rock in place, the notice of location is posted. Within 30 days from the time of posting the claim must be staked. A post or monument is placed and marked at each center end and a post or monument, marked at each corner making six in all within 60 days from the time of notice of location, the location work must be done and recorded in the office of the county clerk. This location work is a hole 6 by 4 by 10 feet or its equivalent. That will hold the ground for a year and fraction of year; that is for one year from the following July and then the assessment work must be done each year there after which amounts to $100 worth of work and under a recent law this proof of labor must be recorded.

 In July, 2005, five scouts and two assistant scoutmasters from Troop 898 of John Day took a high adventure trip to Northern Idaho where they followed the historic Nez Perce Trail through the Bitterroot Mountains between the Frank Church and the Selway-Bitterroot wilderness areas.

Life Scouts Brady Long, Darren King and Parker Burton; Star Scout Daniel Soupir; and First Class Scout Nathan Wunz rode mountain bikes while assistant scoutmasters Everett King and Greg Whipple drove support vehicles over the primitive road that snakes through the largest expanse of wilderness in the 48 contiguous states.

LC church subject of planning meeting

Blue Mountain Eagle

LONG CREEK — The future of the Long Creek Seventh-day Adventist Church building will be the topic of a planning meeting at 4 p.m. Friday, March 11, in Long Creek City Hall. The local Seventh-day Adventist congregation plans to erect a new church to replace the existing one, which was constructed in 1896. The Long Creek Historical Society would like to save the building and have it moved four blocks away to its Fort Townsend site. Historical Society members say, while it is small, it's in good shape and would serve the group's needs as a long-awaited museum for housing artifacts. The community is welcome to attend and offer input. Long Creek City Hall is located at 250 Hardisty St. For more information, call City Hall at 541-421-3601.
