Frank Fritz and Mike Wolfe of American Pickers are headed to Oregon this fall.

American Pickers returning to Oregon

EO Media Group

American Pickers could end up in Grant County this fall if a local collection catches their eye.

The History Channel show features Mike Wolfe and Frank Fritz, who travel the country looking for historically significant antiques — what they call “rusty gold” — that have been hidden away in the corner of an attic or barn. They have plans to film episodes in Oregon in September, and scouts are looking now for interesting collections to check out as they plan their route through Oregon.

“We look for really interesting items of worth,” casting associate Natasha Moore said. “We talk to people and find out the story behind the items and do some digging.”

She said last year they had a good visit to Oregon and hope to see more of the state’s most interesting privately owned antiques when they return.

“There were a lot of people and a lot of counties we didn’t get to visit,” she said.

According to the news release, the show is looking for “characters” with “sizable, unique collections” that the pickers could spend the better part of a day looking through during an episode.

The long list of items they are looking for includes old furniture, board games, movie posters, toys, vending machines, lamps, clocks, motorcycles, dolls, art, dishes, oil cans and other antiques.

To bring a private collection (no antique shops or flea markets) to the scouts’ attention, submit your name, phone number, location, a description of the collection and photos of some of the items to americanpickers@cinetflix.com or call 1-855-OLD-RUST.

Pentzer promoted to assistant district forester

Blue Mountain Eagle

Rob Pentzer has been selected as the assistant district forester for Oregon Department of Forestry’s Central Oregon District.

Pentzer has been part of the district since 2012, serving as the John Day unit forester during some very challenging fire seasons. He is a graduate of the University of Idaho, with a bachelor’s degree in forest ecosystem management. He has extensive knowledge of forestry and wildland fire from his time with ODF, and his prior experience with Idaho Department of Lands.

Pentzer will continue to work from the John Day of-ice as the assistant district forester. His desire to remain part of the community allows for an opportunity for the district to add capacity at a higher level in this part of the district. Pentzer started in his new position in May.

Ryan Miller was selected to fill the John Day unit forester position vacated by Pentzer. Miller has been the stewardship forester in John Day for the last two years, working with private landowners to administer the Forest Practices Act and landowner assistance programs. He started with ODF as a seasonal firefighter in Dallas in 1998, accepting a permanent position in ODF’s Geographic Information Systems Unit in 2000 after completing his Bachelor of Science degree in physical geography from Western Oregon University. He has worked in the State Forests and Private Forests Divisions, in addition to his GIS positions and his recent work as the John Day stewardship forester.

Ryan, his wife, Elisha, and their son, Henry, have made John Day their home.
