A wide array of art on display Friday and Saturday in John Day included pencil and pastel drawings, oil and acrylic paintings and bronze, clay and wooden sculptures.

There were 37 local adult artists displaying 65 pieces and several Grant Union art students had over 100 pieces exhibited in three rooms and down a hallway at the Madden Brothers Performing Arts Center. Three authors also joined in.

The show was organized by a loose knit group of local artists, including Joan Hopper, who said she was pleased with the variety and quality of art presented. She was also impressed by the students who displayed their latest creations.

"We had a great showing from the high school students," she said.
