What we're into

WOWBRARY

It's a funny name, but I'm excited every time I see the email show up in my inbox.

Wowbrary is a weekly email that details the newest arrivals at the Baker County Library District. It announces new books and movies, as well as services offered — for free — to library patrons. (Have kids in school? All it takes is a library card to access Tutor.com and get live help on homework.)

Wowbrary is sent every Wednesday. To sign up, go to <http://wowbrary.org/> and enter your ZIP code in the search bar.

A recent issue of Wowbrary promoted SageCat, the official app for the Sage Library System, which includes libraries in 15 counties across Eastern and Central Oregon. The app, according to the email, "gives you access to library materials from more than 70 libraries in Oregon."

Do you realize how many books are contained in 70 libraries?

This app will be great paired with Wowbrary — it'll be so easy to request the new books that are announced each week.

All you need is a library card and your password. Once installed, you can search the catalog, place a hold, renew items (avoid those late fees!), and store an electronic version of your library card. SageCat is available in the Apple App Store and the Google Play Store.

Now...I better go work on my to-read pile to make room for the new releases. Happy reading!

New releases

'THE GRIEF WE GAVE OUR MOTHER' BY MATTHEW FOWLER

The bright promise of singer-songwriter Matthew Fowler's new album "The Grief We Gave Our Mother" combines clean, crisp guitar playing with Fowler's warm, wistful tenor and tight background harmonies.

Likened to singer-songwriters Ray LaMontagne and Damien Rice, Fowler belongs in their company in more ways than one. His themes revolve around personal growth and regret, and while the album occasionally veers toward ponderous self-absorption — another tendency he shares with LaMontagne and Rice — the singing and playing are usually polished enough to power Fowler through the cloying parts.

On "Rooftops," an optimistic song about his career hopes, Fowler applies the achy aura that permeates the entire album to his ambition.

"So I long for the Knoxville skyline, I long for cold beers and close friends," he sings. "And I long for the sound of my words on the lips of those I have not met yet."

The yearning gives the song its motor. The singing and playing, here and throughout this album, is promising enough that he just might get his wish.
