TUNE TOURS RETURNS TO BAKER CITY

BAKER CITY — Jon Deshler and his "Tune Tours" band returns this weekend for three shows on Saturday.

The group will play Saturday, Sept. 25, at 12:30 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. at the National Historic Oregon Trail Interpretive Center. They will play a third show at 5 p.m. at Geiser-Pollman Park in Baker City.

Admission is free to all performances.

Deshler is joined by Nate Deshler on piano, Neal Grandstaff on guitar, and bass player Justin Schepige. He describes their sound as "jazzy," and said the band will play songs across 150 years of American history.

Deshler founded Tune Tours in March 2020 when his music gigs disappeared. He took his music on the road, recording performances for those who were staying home during the pandemic. He played at the Wooden Shoe Tulip Farm, Mount Angel Abbey, on a street in Silverton, and in the Alvord Desert.

He recorded music in 25 locations during 2020, accompanied by seven different piano players. To learn more, visit his website at www.jondeshlermusic.com or find Tune Tours on Facebook. His recordings from 2020 can be found on YouTube.
