John Day council sees turnover

By JUSTIN DAVIS Blue Mountain Eagle

JOHN DAY — The John Day City Council will have two new faces in the new year. Sitting City Councilor Katrina Randleas cruised easily to re-election, but fellow council members Shannon Adair and Chris Labhart are on their way after being outpolled by challengers Ron Phillips and Sherrie Rininger.

Three of the council's six seats were up for grabs in the election, with the positions going to the top three vote-getters.

Here are the results of the election, based on unofficial returns as of Monday,

Nov. 14: Katrina Randleas: 486 Ron Phillips: 446 Sherrie Rininger: 393

Shannon Adair: 376 Richie Colbeth: 252

Sitting Councilor Chris Labhart missed the deadline to get his name on the ballot but ran as a write-in candidate. Three write-in candidates garnered votes in the balloting, with the top one getting 74 votes, but they were not identified by name by the Grant County

Where that could still make a difference is in the 17-vote margin between Adair and Rininger. If Adair receives enough late mail-in votes to pull ahead by the final count, she will retain her seat on the council. As of Monday, however, she had only narrowed the gap by a single

Psilocybin bans pass

By TONY CHIOTTI Blue Mountain Eagle

PRAIRIE CITY — Two measures on the ballot that proposed prohibitions of psilocybin-related businesses in portions of Grant County passed handily.

While results are still unofficial, the tallies as of late Monday, Nov. 14, left little doubt as to the final outcome.

Measure 12-83, which bans psilocybin-related businesses in unincorporated Grant County, was passing 2,457 to 1,554.

Nothing keeps similar businesses from sprouting up in other incorporated areas of the county.

The measures were filed in response to Oregon Measure 109, which was approved by voters in 2020 and directs the Oregon Health Authority to license and regulate the manufacture, delivery, sale and purchase of products made with psilocybin, also known as "magic mushrooms."

While products derived from psilocybin mushrooms remain a Schedule I substance under the Federal Controlled Substances Act, this measure, now codified in Oregon Revised Statutes as ORS 475A, allows the use of such products by adults under supervised conditions for therapeutic purposes.

The framework requires that such products be cultivated and produced by licensed manufacturers, tested by a licensed testing center and administered through licensed facilitators.

Oregon is the first state to approve such a program. The legislation specifically carves out the right of cities and counties to prohibit the manufacture of psilocybin products in their jurisdictions.

On the midterm election ballots, a total of 27 of Oregon's 36 counties proposed bans, along with more than 100 municipalities. The bans passed in all but two Oregon

Jewell leads mayor's race in Granite By TONY CHIOTTI

GRANITE — A week after Election Day, the mayor's race in the tiny Grant County community of Granite remained too close to call.

Unofficial results as of Monday, Nov. 14, stood as follows:

David Mosteit: 8 Sandra Smith: 11

Dorothy Jewell: 12 A total of 31 ballots have been tabulated so far, and there are 35 registered voters with addresses in Granite, according to Grant County Clerk Brenda Percy.

Ballots postmarked on or before Election Day will be counted, provided they are received by election officials within a week.

In a race this close, the official results will have to wait until the very last ballots are tallied, Percy said. There are challenges on signatures yet to be resolved on county-wide totals. The final counts will be performed on Oct. 29, with certification on the 30th and results announced the morning of Dec. 1.

The vote tallies for Granite's mayoral election were locked in a tie between Sandra Smith and Dorothy Jewell in unofficial returns on election night, Tuesday, Nov. 8. On Thursday, a potentially tie-breaking vote was added to the tally, putting Jewell in the lead by one vote.

Two city council seats will also be decided, with both determined purely from write-in candidates as nobody filed to have their names appear on the ballot. No returns are currently available for that race.

When reached for comment on election night, Jewell said she planned to go down to city hall in the morning and see if she could get in to find the bylaws. "The current council and mayor are the only ones who have keys to the building," she explained, noting the building has been closed for 'some time." Mosteit, the incumbent mayor, is now trailing by four votes, which could be an insurmountable deficit. He was reached by phone the day after Election Day while elk hunting. He was in his truck, warming up with coffee after having "putzed around for a while," unaware of the results. "It is what it is," he said. "And so I'll be glad to step aside and turn it over to those folks." When he heard the vote was a tie, he suggested a tie-breaker could be to "put the two girls at the bottom of the hill and have a race to the mailbox at the top of Center Street and see who wins."

He said he might go to city hall to dig through the boxes of papers to find the city charter, hoping it might spell out the next steps should the election remain tied. But if the unofficial result holds up, that won't be necessary.
