Help with cancer treatment problems

A free program for women dealing with physical problems caused by chemotherapy and radiation will be held this month in Astoria.

"Look Good Feel Better" is sponsored by the American Cancer Society. It focuses on hair loss, skin changes and other issues and will provide techniques to make the most of one's appearance during treatment. Participants also get a $200 make-up package.

The workshop is from 2 to 4 p.m. Oct. 17 on the first floor of the CMH-OHSU Knight Cancer Collaborative, 1905 Exchange St. To register, call 800-227-2345.

This Weekend

Healthy Homes run begins at Barbey Center

The Healthy Homes annual 5K walk or run is set for 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, Oct. 7, and begins at the Barbey Maritime Center at the east end of the Columbia River Maritime Museum.

The "take a stand against violence" event is sponsored by The Harbor and United Way. It's designed to be a fun event while promoting education, prevention and support services for those afected by domestic violence. Suggested donation is $10 per person or $20 per group. All proceeds benefit the survivors of intimate partner violence in Clatsop County.

It is cosponsored by the museum, US Bank, Astoria Parks and Recreation, North Coast Food Web, Columbia River Coffee Roasters, Fred Meyer and the Domestic Violence Council.

It's a Lutheran celebration 500 years in the making

First Lutheran Church kicks off the 500th anniversary celebration of the Protestant Reformation with a concert at 4 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 7, at the church, 725 33rd St., Astoria.

Several area Lutheran churches – as well as Lutherans and Christians around the world – are joining to honor and celebrate the movement that began in 1517 by Martin Luther and ended up reforming the church.

Paul Tegels, associated professor of music and university organist at Pacific Lutheran University in Tacoma, will present the concert.

Tegels has performed extensively in solo and ensemble in the United States, Europe, Japan and New Zealand. He has performed at national conventions of the Organ Historical Society and has played some of the most significant organs in the United States.

"Reformation 500," a community event, will conclude the monthlong celebration at 2 p.m. Nov. 4 at Peace Lutheran Church, 565 12 St., Astoria.

It includes a worship service at 2 p.m.

with Bishop David Bauer-Rieke preaching. And offering designated for Hope House in Astoria will be collected.

At 3:20 p.m., there will be breakout sessions about music and art of the Reformation. Family and children's activities begin at 3:40 p.m., followed by a dinner at 5 p.m.

Cost for dinner is $10 per person or $25 per family and reservations are required. More information is available by calling 503-325-3871.

News in Brief

Rock-painting event is Saturday

An event to paint rocks and socialize is set for 3 to 6 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 7, at Port of Call Bistro & Bar, 894 Commercial St., Astoria.

Children are welcome to the free event. Some art supplies will be provided, but participants are welcome to bring their own.

As mentioned by columnist Emma Edwards recently, there are an estimated 500 rock-painting groups in the United States with the goal of making people smile and spreading kindness through their creations, which are left at random places in the community.
