

Woman arrested after she reaches for officer's gun

An intoxicated woman who caused a disturbance at Warrenton Mini Mart was arrested after she fought with officers who were trying to find a ride home for her.

Holly Eileen Gunderson, 37, of Warrenton was booked at Clatsop County Jail for resisting arrest and second-degree disorderly conduct. Her blood-alcohol content was recorded at 0.32 percent, four times the legal limit.

The disturbance was reported shortly before 10 p.m. Oct. 8. Two officers were trying to calm her down, according to a police report, but she became enraged when one of them called her by name and she repeatedly demanded "How do you know my name?"

At one point, she shoved one of the officers, reached for his gun and fought with both officers as they attempted to place her in handcuffs, according to the report. She was taken to Columbia Memorial Hospital for an evaluation before being transferred to the jail.

Driver fails to signal, is arrested for so much more

A driver who failed to signal for a right-hand turn was arrested, as was his passenger, when officers found suspected heroin, methamphetamine and an open bottle of vodka in the car, according to a police report.

In addition, the driver had a warrant and failed to carry and present his driver's license. And there was no court-ordered interlock device installed on his vehicle.

Officer Robert Wirt was on patrol shortly before 6 p.m.

Oct. 7 with his K-9 Gabe in Hammond when he watched the driver commit the traffic error and then accelerate when he spotted the patrol car behind him, according to the report.

Timothy Neal Cooper, 40, of Salem had a warrant for his arrest and was taken into custody. Inside Cooper's Jeep, officers found the illegal substances, according to the report.

Cooper was booked at Clatsop County Jail for possession of methamphetamine and heroin as well as several driving violations.

Passenger Kymberlee K. Capps, 34, of Salem also was booked for possession of methamphetamine and heroin.

WHS grad, Hall of Famer dies

Jon Rowley, a 1961 Warrenton High School graduate who went on to be a culinary star in Seattle, died of kidney failure Oct. 4 at his home on Vashon Island, Wash.

Rowley studied at Reed

College in Portland and was a restaurant consultant and fisherman who used his ties with Alaska fishermen to provide and popularize the famed Copper River salmon to restaurant owners in Seattle.

He was named to the Warrenton High School Hall of Fame in 2008.

Rowley is survived by daughters Megan of Seattle and Caitlin of Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., a brother and one grandson.

Road Work

Astoria-Megler Bridge: The Great Columbia Crossing is Sunday, Oct. 16, and traffic delays are expected on the bridge and Marine Drive between 6 and 11:30 a.m. to make room for 3,000 runners. Drivers could wait as long as 45 minutes to cross the bridge.

Highway 101 Business: Bridge rehabilitation work to Old Youngs Bay and Lewis & Clark River bridges. Minor delays should be expected. Expected completion is November.

Logan Road: Construction and improvements will close the Stavebolt Bridge beginning Monday, Oct. 16. It will be closed and a detour in place for approximately one month.

City sets up website on ballot measure

Warrenton Community Library has set up a website, savethewarrentonlibrary.com, in hopes of making the public more aware of the November ballot measure.

The city is asking residents if they wish to renew the five-year library operations local option levy.

If passed, the Measure will fund the operations of the Warrenton Community Library with a rate of $0.330 per $1,000 of assessed value for fiscal years 2018-19 through 2022-23. For a home assessed at $100,000 that would be $33 per year.

Revenue can only be used for library operations.

Warrenton Community Library is used by residents of the city, people in the surrounding area, and many tourists. It provides services to students, free library cards (with parent/guardian permission) for all children in Clatsop County, and offers a summer reading program.

The library has 19,000 books, audio books and movies for checkout; 4,096 current library cards; four well-maintained computers for public use; Wi-Fi; and is open six days a week, from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

The special election is Nov. 7. If the measure fails, the city is unlikely to keep the library open.
