Training talk covers how moods affect our dogs

Cati Foss, owner of Arnicadia Dog Training, is the featured speaker at a 4-H dog seminar set for Monday, Feb. 19. Foss will speak about emotional well-being and how it affects animal training.

The public is welcome to attend. The day begins with a youth showmanship and rally obedience training program led by instructor Alexis Carter.

The program begins at 8:30 a.m., with Foss speaking at noon, at the Clatsop County Fairgrounds, 92937 Walluski Loop, Astoria. No lunch will be available for purchase on site.

For more information, contact Lorna Brandt at 503-440-0573.

CMH names new operations officer

Columbia Memorial Hospital named Nicole Williams its new chief operating officer.

Williams joined the hospital in April 2017 and will assume day-to-day oversight of CMH's operations.

Williams was raised in Astoria and has served the community for more than 20 years. Before joining CMH, she served as the CEO of

Williams

Clatsop Care Health District for four years, and was with Clatsop County government for more than 16 years. Williams holds a master's degree in public administration.

Williams' position is new to CMH and enables CEO Erik Thorsen time to focus on long-term goals.
