Commercial fishers getting state compensation

Clatsop County's commercial salmon fishers began receiving payments this week for impacts caused by changes to Columbia River commercial salmon harvesting policies.

The state set aside $500,000 in the Columbia River Transition Fund to provide compensation for direct economic losses and reimbursement for fishing equipment purchased to comply with the policy change.

Payments ranging from $56 to $8,750 have been mailed to 126 commercial salmon permit holders eligible for compensation.

The transition fund was set up by the Oregon Legislature in 2013 following the adoption of a plan by Oregon and Washington to phase out salmon gillnetting on the Columbia's main channel by requiring fishers to move to off-channel sites or switch to alternative gear such as seine nets.

In the wake of the new policy, many commercial fishers invested in new equipment in anticipation of the new rules, saw their harvests reduced or experienced other financial impacts.

Fire department seeks needy residents for food baskets

Warrenton Fire Department is taking applications from those in need who'd like a Christmas food basket.

Applications are available during business hours at the main fire station, 225 S. Main Ave. Since today, Nov. 30, is the last day to apply, it's recommended residents fill out applications while at the fire station. No late applications will be accepted.

The baskets are for those who live in the city of Warrenton or the Warrenton Fire Protection District. Proof of residency is required and only 100 applications will be accepted.

Food baskets can be picked up from 4 to 7 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 19, at the fire station.

The agency is not providing gifts this year so it can focus on providing the maximum amount of food per basket.

Leaders and youth sought for 4-H programs

A new 4-H Club for those interested in aerospace and electricity is forming in Warrenton.

The club is for young people ages 9 to 19 and members will learn about electrical circuits, conductors, magnets, the science behind planes and rockets and more.

Participants will experience hands-on learning and activities and have a chance to make like-minded friends.

Another 4-H Club for dog lovers is looking for members and there are youth interested in photography and art who need a club leader.

Adult volunteers, or Cloverbud leaders, are being sought throughout the county

An informational meeting for interested adult volunteers is set for 5:30 p.m. Monday, Dec. 10, at the 4-H and Extension Office in Astoria.

To join 4-H, to volunteer as an adult, or to attend the informational meeting, contact Sandra Carlson at 503-325-8573.
