New six-week class designed for caregivers

"Savvy Caregiving," a free six-session training program designed for caregivers who serve family members and friends with dementia/Alzheimer's, will be held 10 a.m. to noon Fridays, beginning Feb. 8.

The program is sponsored by NW Senior and Disability Services and will be held at the office, 2002 S.E. Chokeberry Ave., Warrenton.

The goal of Savvy is to increase knowledge and skills to lessen caregiver stress and improve levels of care. Included is information about dementia, its progressive losses, caregiving skills, setting flexible goals, involving family and friends, and reducing caregiver health risks.

To register, call Suzanne Bjaranson at 503-861-4202.

Area students get college honors

Seven local students were named to the dean's list of their universities for the fall 2018 term.

Abby Mathews of Warrenton, Whitney Westerholm of Seaside and Danielle Williams of Cannon Beach were named to the dean's list for Eastern Oregon University.

Four local students were named to the dean's list at Pacific University.

The students were Brittany Nyberg, Kaneah Owen and Hailey Ranta of Astoria and Danielle Keen of Seaside.

To qualify for Pacific's dean's list, a student must achieve a term grade-point average of 3.7 while completing 12 or more course units. Eastern Oregon's dean's list requires a 3.5 gpa and at least 12 course hours.
