

Warrenton graduates win awards, scholarships

The Columbia Press

Sixty-two Warrenton High School students are expected to walk across the stage tonight during the school's 101st commencement.

They've spent hundreds of hours in classes, excelled in sports, scholastic and extra-curricular activities and put dozens of hours into community service.

This week, the graduating class of 2019 enjoyed senior breakfast at Trina & Ron's, pondered the road ahead during Baccalaureate at Coastline Christian Fellowship on Thursday evening and won thousands of dollars in scholarships.

Following are some of the awards and scholarships graduates received.

Help sought to spring-clean reserve

North Coast Land Conservancy needs volunteers Saturday, June 8, to remove yellow flag iris, a lovely but invasive non-native plant, from Wolf Bay Habitat Reserve near Svensen.

A work party is set for 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Columbia River marsh.

Digging out iris in vulnerable wetlands is hard work, requiring plenty of bending, and it's always muddy. But some volunteers claim it's their favorite stewardship event, the conservancy said.

To volunteer, contact Melissa Reich at 503-738-9126 and wear rubber boots and gloves. NCLC will provide tools. Participants should bring drinking water and lunch. There are no toilets or potable water on site.

Dogs are not allowed.
