Regatta: Major event for Astoria includes Warrenton

the region's best qualities.

“The main goal is community involvement, tradition and the history of Regatta, which is 125 years old,” Dowaliby said.

About the picture Regatta photographer Mitch Eckhardt took on the night of her coronation: “I hadn't felt that happy in a long time,” she said. “I couldn't stop smiling. It was a huge honor.”

And a family tradition.

Dowaliby's sister, Kim, was Regatta queen in 2013 and her oldest sister, Meg, was a Regatta princess in 2011.

“Regatta has helped me in huge ways,” she said. “It has opened my eyes to the community, the needs in the community. ... I never thought I could memorize a speech and give it in front of 100 to 150 people. It also helped with talking to people and being comfortable in big settings. I've grown a lot.”

Dowaliby and the three princesses rode in the Junior Parade on carts pushed by Astoria High athletes.

About 100 children, their pets or bikes and their parents participated in the parade, which was sponsored by the Kiwanis Club, Columbia Memorial Hospital and Providence Seaside. Pirates, jellyfish and dressed up dogs wound around Robinson Community Park and ended with a Regatta Movie in the Park event sponsored by Warrenton Business Association.

Walmart donated 3,000 hot dogs and Van Dusen Beverages donated soft drinks. Serena Moha's dad, Mike, passed out free popcorn throughout the showing of “Toy Story.”
