

Park: Changes come to four-way stop

postpone the vote until more people could provide input, but others on the panel disagreed. All commissioners approved the name change once Commissioner Pam Ackley moved to select the most popular name.

"It is a much-needed improvement over post office park. That's not a very inspired name," Balensifer said.

In other business, the commission gave initial approval to a proposal to charge fees in lieu of some sidewalk improvements.

It would apply to projects in which adding a sidewalk would be awkward, such as a single improved parcel on an older street without sidewalks.

"If it doesn't connect to anything or doesn't make sense, such as they'd have to remove a large tree, that's when it would apply," City Manager Linda Engbretson said.

The developer would be charged a fee, such as $3,700 for a typical property with a 50-foot street frontage.

The in-lieu fee would be placed in a separate fund for sidewalk construction in more appropriate parts of the city, such as along Harbor Drive.

The proposal requires a second vote at a future meeting.
