

Graduation: A bittersweet ending to high school

Each student will get a sign with their name in the vehicle's front window and many students will bring family members with them and decorate their cars and caps.

It's not a parade exactly, high school officials warn, but an orderly procession in which the community can come out and cheer them on.

The students will drive through the bus barn area and be directed one-by-one onto John Mattila Field, as "Pomp and Circumstance" is played by senior band members via livestream.

Once on the field, the student will be allowed to get out, pick up a diploma and have a photo taken. There will be no handshakes.

"This is a good class – academically strong, athletically strong, civic-minded," Heyen said. "I got into this job for the relationships, for seeing the kids on day-to-day basis. Not being able to do that is killing me."

Students also realize it's a tough but significant time in their and the world's history.

"Honestly, it's a lot of mixed emotions," senior Natalie Osoguera said. "It's taught me to always expect the unexpected. We've dreamed about graduation since Day One and, although it's not like a regular graduation, it will definitely be one to remember!"

Each senior will get a professional photo and a copy of the entire ceremony on DVD, which includes a welcome from Heyen, the national anthem sung by Isabella Morrill, speeches by Valedictorians Isabella Morrill and Kaisa Liljenwall and Salutatorian Thomas Atwood, and the senior slideshow – a WHS tradition that includes photos of each student as a child and as a senior.

"I'm very sad about how the school year turned out and how the Class of 2020 are unable to have our prom and our traditional graduation," Josie Posey said. "I am very glad that we are able to do a drive-through graduation on our original date."

No one should have to end their high school career this way, senior Connor Carretta said.

"This class of ours was some of the brightest students I've ever had the pleasure of spending my high school career with," he said. "The fact that we don't get a 'proper' graduation is a big letdown for all of us."

The end of high school is a bittersweet affair for Kale Moss.

"I don't get my final moments with some of the people who made me who I am," he said. "I'm not going to lie, it is really sad. But there is a bright side, just as there is in every bad situation anyone ever goes through. For the rest of our lives, everyone in this year's graduating class will have a unique connection with each other."

Athlete Kenzie Ramsey said she has no regrets.

"Honestly, I don't really care about the walking or the ceremony, just the actual being graduated part of it," she said. "Grades were important to me, but I've gone through high school valuing the sports I've played, so I'm pretty fulfilled with my four years (except missing out on softball this year). I'm just ready to get that paper to make it official and move on to the next
