Calling all junior naturalists for online camp

Wildlife Center of the North Coast will hold its popular Junior Naturalist Summer Camp online this year.

Summer camp is scheduled for 8 a.m. to noon daily July 27-31.

"We know many families are struggling financially right now, and so we are offering our camp free of charge," organizers said.

Camp T-shirts and supplies can be purchased for an additional cost and donations will be accepted for camper families who are able.

Delve into work of conservancy

North Coast Land Conservancy will host an online gathering to introduce residents to the nonprofit organization, one of the state's leading land trusts.

Executive Director Katie Voelke will lead the gathering, which will cover NCLC's history and projects. Voelke will discuss how, where and why the group conserves land.

NCLC was formed in 1986 and is based in Seaside. It owns thousands of acres in Lincoln, Tillamook and Clatsop counties.

The gathering is from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Monday, Aug. 3.

Network while still in your PJs

Astoria-Warrenton Area Chamber of Commerce will hold its monthly networking breakfast online this month.

The "breakfast" will be from 7:45 to 9 a.m. Tuesday, July 28.

To participate, send an email to events@oldoregon.com or call 503-325-6311 for more information and the link to RSVP.

Manage diabetes with help of class

A monthlong class in self-managing diabetes begins Tuesday, Aug. 4.

The program by Columbia Memorial Hospital has been recognized by the American Diabetes Association for quality education and support.

The class provides one-on-one consultation with a certified diabetes educator or registered nurse and a registered dietitian, who will help participants set personalized diabetes plans.

Four in-depth classes will show ways to put the plan into action.

There is a charge for the course, which may be covered by insurance. A family member or friend can attend at no additional charge.

To enroll, call 503-338-4012.

The class meets from 6 to 8:30 p.m. Tuesdays in the Coho Room of the Columbia Center, 2021 Marine Drive.
