Poetry entries sought by guild

The Writer's Guild of Astoria seeks poetry from residents of Clatsop, Pacific and Tillamook counties for a contest in connection with Jericho Brown's visit to the area.

Brown

Brown, author of anthologies "The Tradition," "The New Testament," and "Please," won the 2020 Pulitzer Prize in Poetry. He will talk and read from his works at 7 p.m. Nov. 5 at the Liberty Theatre, 1203 Commercial St., Astoria.

The three winners of the poetry competition will be invited to work with a performance coach and read during the event. First place winners also will receive $100 gift cards to Lucy's Books and their works will be featured on the Writer's Guild website.

Entrants can submit up to three poems as a single .doc, .docx, or .pdf attachment to info@thewritersguild.org.

Each entry should include the poet's name, competition category, home address, email, and phone number. The guild will judge the entries in three categories: middle school, high school and college/community.
