

Game provided bright end to dreary day

Pitcher Dylan Atwood shined on the mound and at bat in the April 1 game against Scio.

Rainy days and Mondays always get me down. I'd have to agree with the '70s Carpenters song, particularly in the spring and when anticipating an evening baseball game.

But the game was worth watching while being uncomfortable.

The Warrenton Warriors Baseball Team stomped the Scio Loggers 11-4 on April 1 in the rain and still the game was played in its entirety.

I had emerged from my vehicle fearing not only a game postponement, but for my camera as a light sprinkle fell.

It was not a question of if it would start pouring, but when. The forecast had predicted 6 p.m. showers, but along the coast, we know how unpredictable rain can be.

In the final nonleague game of the season, Dylan Atwood not only picked up the win on the mound, but he benefited by hitting the first of two home runs in the sixth inning. Kaison Smith followed up with the second.

"It was good to get the bats going throughout the lineup," Coach Lennie Wolfe said. "It's been a long time since we had two home runs in a single game. But what was especially nice was the number of quality line drives hit to the middle of the field. A lot on the guys felt pretty locked in at the plate."

The Warriors played an away league contest Tuesday against Rainier.

CMH hires new hospitalist

Columbia Memorial Hospital has a new hospitalist, Dr. Bill Lytollis.

A hospitalist is a dedicated in-patient physician who works exclusively in a hospital.

Lytollis began providing in-patient services at CMH late last month.

He most recently worked as the division president for Apogee Physicians in Coeur D'Alene, Idaho. While there, he was responsible for 19 hospitalist programs in the United States.

Lytollis previously has worked as a program director, medical director, physician and scientist.

He earned his medical degree from Oregon Health & Science University, where he also completed a residency and fellowship. He also holds a doctorate in organic chemistry from the University of Newcastle in Australia.

Lytollis is board certified in internal medicine.
