All of the plants for sale are organic and have been selected for their suitability to Clatsop County.

Conference focus on climate change

Place Matters, a three-day virtual conference that focuses this year on climate change, will feature presentations by Oregon health experts, researchers and local food producers.

The free conference is hosted by Clatsop Community Health Advocacy Resource Team (CHART) and Clatsop County Department of Public Health.

Climate change impacts North Coast people and food systems, according to Emily Reilly, Clatsop County health promotion specialist.

"It's affecting the air we breathe, causing more allergy problems for people, and making it harder on commercial and recreational fisher folks and food producers," Reilly said. "This free conference is one way we are raising public awareness about climate change and its impact on our health, well-being and the food we enjoy."

There are three one-hour presentations.

- An overview session led by Kim Tham of Oregon Health Authority's climate and health program, is from 4 to 5 p.m. Tuesday, April 19.

- North Coast infrastructure and the ocean blob is the topic by professors from the University of Washington and Oregon State University. It's from noon to 1 p.m. Wednesday, April 20.

- Local food systems and agriculture is the topic for representatives from Tre-Fin Foods, 46 North Farms, and North Coast Food Web. It's scheduled for 4 to 5 p.m. Thursday, April 21.

Symphonic band sets spring concert

North Coast Symphonic Band will feature "Movies, Musicals, Marches, and More" during their concert at 2 p.m. Sunday, April 24, at the Liberty Theater, 1203 Commercial St., Astoria.

Terry Dahlgren of Warrenton returns as guest conductor.

Master of ceremonies is Brian Bergman.

The concert includes tunes such as "How to Train Your Dragon," "Music for a Darkened Theater," selections from Les Misérables, "Circus Days," "Lassus Trombone," and "Funiculi, Funicula."

Dahlgren recently retired after 32 years as a public school music educator, most of it in Seaside.

Guitarist Dave Drury will perform concert prelude music a half an hour before the concert.

Tickets are $15 general and $8 for students and can be purchased in advance at libertyastoria.showare.com.

Tickets also will be available at the door beginning at noon on concert day.

North Coast Symphonic Band offers local musicians of all ages the chance to network, learn from each other, and maintain their skill level in a positive and supportive environment.
