Water source stabilizes natural area

The Arch Cape Domestic Water Supply District now has a local source for its water.

The agency just completed the purchase of 1,500 acres of forestland thanks to $5.5 million in federal funding and $250,000 from Clatsop County.

The property will become the publicly owned Arch Cape Forest.

Purchase of the watershed -- which is adjacent to Oswald West State Park, North Coast Land Conservancy's Rainforest Reserve, and the Cape Falcon Marine Reserve -- will permanently protect the source of Arch Cape's drinking water.

"The health and resilience of the surrounding forest directly controls both the quantity and the quality of our domestic drinking water," said Phil Chick, district manager of the water district. "The acquisition of the forest permits watershed management primarily for the protection of our water while providing potential conservation, recreation and economic benefits."

A healthy forest with diverse streamside vegetation is vital to holding soil in place, preventing erosion, and improving downstream water quality.
