Turnham and Matthews of Crook creek were arrested last Saturday by Constable Colby on a warrant issued from Justice Holman's court. These gentlemen were charged with assaulting E. G. Green, but in the trial on Monday no evidence was produced to show that any assault had been committed and hence the defendants were discharged. The trouble grew out of a mining deal. Messrs. Turnham and Matthews, it seems, had leased their mining property on Louse creek for a certain length of time to E. G. Green. When the term of the lease had expired, Turnham and Matthews went to take possession of their claim, as they thought under the law, the had a right to do, but which claim Green disputed. The court settled the matter and perhaps there will be no further trouble.

A dispatch from Seattle January 10, says Mr. Westlake has returned from the goldmining districts of Southern Oregon, whence he went a couple of weeks ago. He reported to his companions that he is in favor of locating in Southern Oregon in preference to going to Alaska.
"The richness of gold mines of Oregon was a surprise to me," Mr. Westlake said, "and from what I have seen, and all I could learn, I am willing to take my chances of finding rich diggings in Oregon in preference to hunting new ones in Alaska. We have concluded to prospect for new locations, and since plenty of gold has been found, I don't see why we can't find good paying claims."
"I was amazed at the richness of Oregon. I have seen fine farms back East, but some of the grain and fruit ranches I saw in Southern Oregon discounted any I have ever seen."
"Our party will leave Thursday for Portland, where we will buy what we need for our prospecting trip, which we estimate will last at least one year."

Samples of ore show on the streets appear to be rich in sulphide of mercury. Float cinnabar is often found in the gold placers on Picket creek and sometime specimens of gold completely amalgamated.
John Abbott Jr. came into town from Grants Pass on Monday and reports everything progressing nicely at his uncle's mine. The new strata is nearly completed and will be running in a few days. Two tunnels have been run in on the lode, one four feet long and the other 70 feet, which shows it to be from one to two feet wide and very rich in free milling ore ranging in value from $50 to $75 per ton. There are 25 tons of this kind of ore on the dump at present.
John Lockhart, who has just returned from the Briggs creek district on the lower Illinois river, says the Oak Flat Hydraulic Mining Company, of whose plant and grounds Mrs. Wilder of Baltimore, are the principal owners, is rapidly nearing completion of the development work which consists of five miles of mining ditch six feet wide on top, four feet wide on bottom and three feet deep. They also have two giants in operation and a complete sawmill outfit, which they keep running night and day.
F. L. Wright of Cripple Creek, Colo., who spent about six weeks in this county last fall looking for some desirable mining property, returned Sunday bringing with him his family. Mr. Wright has rented a house in the city for his family, but he will spend most of his time developing his mine in the Illinois river district. We are glad to have such men as Mr. Wright come among us, for his faith in the future of Southern Oregon as a mining section (and this faith is based upon years of experience in quartz mining) will strengthen others.
