Grants Pass is the county seat of Josephine county and is situated in the center of the Southern Oregon gold mining district.

Dreyfus will have a new trial and it is to be hoped a fair one, but this would be difficult in a French court.

John Galvin and Edgar Cuthfield have launched the Dewey, an amateur paper to be published in the Pass. May success attend your efforts, boys, as all the harm our editor will ever wish you.

So many commissions have Uncle Sam at work that he is likely to overlook some of them, the war investigation committee for instance. The committee will fail to find the nigger in the woodpile, likely.

The apple orchards are yielding more abundantly this year than was anticipated at the beginning of the picking season. This is surely gratifying to the owners and more so to know that Southern Oregon apples are admitted superior to those of any other place on the Pacific coast this season.

The spoils system in American politics is dangerous. He who assists in promoting the election of some one of his party may be convicted for office as would be a convict from the penitentiary, but political necessities, we are told by some very fine people, must be in order to meet the exigencies of the hour.

The difficulty between England and France remains unchanged except it is that the latter shows symptoms of receding from the position first taken. The attitude of Russia will largely influence the action of the Republic. England stands firm and will fight the two powers if need be to a successful termination.

The sewer question has not passed our notice yet, it will be discussed in a practical light from our standpoint between now and the meeting of the regular session of the legislature when it is hoped there may be such a change in the city charter as will enable the people of this city to make progress in whatever way they may see fit.

It does no good for the government that 7000 officials have been turned over by the president from the classified service to, properly speaking, the spoliars of government. Had that many thousand, or more still, been put into the classified service it would be progression instead of retrogression as it now is. But it has been too much for the president to withstand when he has been earnestly importuned for some of the crumbs that have fallen from Uncle Sam's table.

The further west President McKinley comes the more he will find out that public opinion is in favor of retaining hold of the Philippine islands. He is one of the presidents of the United States that manages in some way to find out what the people think and then he acts largely in accordance with that view. Occasionally there may arise a time when the public may be in the wrong, then it becomes the chief exception to have a backbone made, as it were of iron.

In 1897 there were shipped from the Ashland depot about 70,000 boxes of peaches which netted the growers approximately $21,000, but for this year the number of boxes shipped was 60,000 while the net price was $28,000. The profits, of course, were much better than they were last year. The peach industry this season has been a profitable one and it is likely to become more so as times become better and the people are more able to buy. One reason why there was no more profit last year was the fact that thousands of people were unable to buy fruit while this year the reverse has been largely the case.

An old maxim reads, "When thieves fall out and fight, just men will get their dues." No intimation that Spreckle and Arbuckle are thieves but when they fall out and cut prices on sugar, the people will get what they ought to have—sugar at a price that is reasonable. Arbuckle dropped the price on the coast one half cent a pound and claimed himself satisfied with the profit made. Then Spreckle has been making enormously on his sugar sales. The fight did not last long, however, for the reason that Arbuckle was shut out from the competition on account of a change for the higher in the freight rates. Claus is still the Sugar king of the Pacific coast.

The mining outlook for the state of Oregon is generally acknowledged to be excellent. The past year a great number of mining experts have looked over the various mining districts and invariably these men report that they have been agreeably surprised at the magnitude showing the developed mines are making. Aside from the gold districts there is in Southern Oregon some excellent copper prospects, that so far as indications on the surface go only need the right kind of men with money to open them up. The section referred to is an ideal one for mining. Timber and water are in abundance, and with a few miles of railroad the copper could be marketed very cheaply.—Western Mining World.

President McKinley's order removing 7000 government employees from the classified service and turning them over to the spoliars will lose the republican party thousands of votes at the November election. Its agony for our new diplomatic and consular service is anything but encouraging.—Oregonian.

No man in the history of the United States has been given a better opportunity to make for himself a name than has President McKinley. Coming to the presidency when universal business depression and almost universal distrust prevailed, he restored business confidence and whether we see in this the relation of cause and effect or not, business prosperity returned to us. In the conduct of the war, he has shown wisdom and discretion. His firm adherence to the wise and humane policy that prompted us to interfere in the affairs of unhappy Cuba, has gained for him the respect of the world. But President McKinley is in danger of wrecking his fair prospects by the manifestation of his fatal weakness. The conviction is being forced upon the friends of pure government that McKinley is somewhat of a spoilsman and that he lacks the moral courage to resist the spoils seeking horde who are hungering to feed at the public crib. The spirit of a civil service reform is in the air. Patriotism demands it for the preservation of our institutions. The business interests of the country demand it for the extension of our commerce. England, France and Germany beat us in the markets of the world because of their better consular service. Their representatives in foreign lands and especially among those nations with whom they have trade relations, are men trained for their positions while ours are mere political party pullers, in many cases, whose only claim is that they have rendered service in a presidential campaign or that some friend near the administration has recommended them. What we need and what we must have, is a civil service system divorced entirely from partisan politics. The extension of our system of government to the newly acquired colonies makes this demand more imperative. If President McKinley persists in ignoring this demand, if instead of extending the civil service rules, he uses his power and his office to reward political workers, he bids fair to send down to posterity a name that, however honorable in other respects, will carry with it the remembrance of a great wrong done to the American people and to the cause of righteousness in government.

A SLANDER.

The Telegram of yesterday published a special communication from this place regarding the suit now in hearing before the District Court involving the title to the Greenback mine on the Grange creek, in which appears the following statement: "The case arises out of Hannum and Browning having attempted to locate a mine on one therefore duly filed upon by C. P. Brown. The defendants charge Hannum and Browning with being nothing more than 'cruisers' for a certain Colorado buccannery corporation, which makes it a business to involve every valuable mine in the West in litigation."

The article in question has excited great indignation in this community, which recognize the injustice and wrong that would result if the sentiments therein expressed should be supposed to be accepted and countenanced by our people.

We have purposely from the outset of this litigation avoided editorial comment. "Editorial by newspaper" of any case, whether civil or criminal, induces popular prejudice, weakens reliance upon the courts, stimulates resentment from all interested in or with the party criticized, and invariably works only harm. Crimes are committed and wrongs perpetrated everywhere. In the machinery of government courts are organized to punish the criminal and rectify the wrong. An unbiased, upright and fearless judiciary is the greatest bulwark of modern civilization. Unswayed by popular sentiment, it should guarantee to every man the rights which are given him by law. Fortunately this community has a court which merits and is accorded the unquestioning confidence of all. It is learned in the law and knows neither friend nor foe in its interpretation.

We shall not allow the provocation even of such an article as that quoted from to induce us to break the rule we have adopted, but we have the right to resent the untrue, unwarranted, gratuitous and slanderous aspersions upon the character of the plaintiffs in this case and those who have espoused their cause. Browning and Hannum are boys who have grown up in Josephine County. They possess the confidence and respect of their best citizens. No one who knows them questions their good faith, or doubts their honorable intent in this, or other matters. They located, worked with their own hands and extracted thousands of dollars from their Greenback Mine before they met, or ever heard of the parties to whom they bonded their claim, and who by force of circumstances have been compelled to come to their assistance in this issue. Mr. Frank T. Sutherland, a man of very wide experience in such matters, the accuracy of whose judgment on mines is recognized in every great mining center of the world, came to Southern Oregon early last spring to see for himself what it contained of promise in that line. He came from his home in California where he had been engaged for many months in the installation of a great and successful enterprise which he had inaugurated there.

Late in June he visited for the first time the Greenback Mine and met its claimants. Believing that at last he had found something which merited his attention he secured an option, and conferred regarding it with certain prominent citizens of New York and Colorado, who at once joined him in the enterprise and they made a conditional purchase of the property. The first parties in interest are still Browning and Hannum, the original locators and claimants. The Colorado associates of Mr. Hannum are men of the highest standing in that state. Mr. David H. Moffatt and Mr. Eben Smith have done probably more than any two men to develop the mining industries of that wonderful state. Mr. Moffatt was at one time President of the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad and for many years has been President of the First National Bank of Denver, an institution of enormous strength and prestige, with deposits of over twelve millions of dollars. He is a man who is by nature, training and habit averse to litigation.

In that terrible crash of 1893, when many of the strongest banks collapsed in ruin, when the great business houses were going down in one almost universal cataclysm and it looked as if all was to be buried beneath that awful wave of financial distress, David H. Moffatt, stood as the bulwark, which stopped its progress, and saved from a pauper's fate thousands and thousands of the inhabitants of that beautiful city. When others were attaching right and left and sparing none, every house which had entrusted its banking interests to David H. Moffatt, stood open. And the bank stood open too, and pumped into popular favor as no similar institution ever did before in any city on earth. It cost a vast sum of money at the time, but the wisdom, the foresight, the kindness and humanity, which prompted it, have endeared David H. Moffatt's name to men whose children will rise up to bless him long after he has gone to his reward.

Is that the kind of man to cast such slurs upon? To accuse of being the forerunner of litigation, the oppressor of the innocent? We don't think so. We welcome such men to our state and to our country. We want them to come from Colorado and California; from Nevada and Utah and every other locality, where people have learned that mining is the most profitable business men can engage in. We believe we have something here which can be made into mines and we want their money and their influence, and most of all their confidence in our fairness and honorable intentions, because we know that it takes money to develop mines.

We want them to feel that they shall have their rights protected just as well as they would be at home. That no attempt to create sentiment against them will be tolerated by our people, but that every man and every interest, from the bank to the humblest miner, say to them "We welcome you as friends; we consider your interests our interests and you need not fear because you have been willing to risk your money in our community that unfair advantage will be taken of you."

Open Letter.

EDITOR COURIER.—In the Portland evening Telegram of November 1st, there appeared a special from this place in which the writer characterized Browning and Hannum in the now pending Browning-Hannum vs Brown mining case in the circuit court, "Cruisers for a certain Colorado buccannery corporation." We, the business men of this city who have had business dealings with the afore said gentlemen, desire through the columns of your paper to brand the attacks as scurrilous and libelous. It is not our intention to attempt to influence the court, but to refute the charge made against our honorable citizens and against some of the best mining men of the United States.

Land Grant to be Constructed.

The settlers and purchasers of lands involved in the suit brought by the United States in the circuit court of the United States for this district against the Oregon Central Military Road Company, and all of their grantees or those claiming under, by or through them, filed a very voluminous answer and cross-complaint yesterday through Thayer, St. Lawrence & Schaeffer, their attorneys. The amount of lands involved aggregate about 69,000 acres, extending nearly throughout the entire grant originally made by the United States to the Oregon Central Military Road Company, covering every alternate section of land for six miles on each side, from Eugene City to the southeast boundary of the state.

This grant, originally made by the government in 1864, has been a bone of contention on the part of the general land department for a number of years, and has been through all the courts, including the supreme court of the United States, in various phases. The answer filed by the settlers and purchasers from the military road company pleads the act of congress of date March 2, 1866, and ask the court for a confirmation of their title to this land.

The act in question, it is asserted, secures absolute confirmation of title to the land to all purchasers and settlers deriving their title through the military road company, provided it was purchased or secured in good faith, and take the position that, no matter whether patent in the first instance was issued to the military road company erroneously or not.

From the answer filed, it would appear that some of the defendants have resided on their lands and improved the same for over 20 years, although the military road company has, it is asserted, under a mistaken idea paid taxes on them up to a comparatively late date. It would seem that the act of congress relied upon is very sweeping. Among the parties defendant is named the California and Oregon Land Company, a corporation formed by the same individuals comprising the Oregon Central Military Road Company, who has bought out all of the interest to these lands originally enjoyed by the Oregon Central Military Road Company, the guarantee under the grant of 1864.

The complaint filed by the United States in this case alleges that a great deal of the land patented to the company is outside the limit of the grant, and, because of that, asks that all patents issued under such a state of mistaken facts be annulled. On the other hand, the attorneys for these purchasers insist that, no matter if such is the case or not, the provisions of the act of congress, approved March 2, 1866, does not refer to lands without the limits of the grant held by either corporations or private persons other than the original grantees, and as the original grantees have practically deeded away all of these lands, it would appear that the United States can recover none of the lands itself, but will have to seek its recourse by an action at law for the value of the lands against the military road company.

This is another instance where an act of congress comprising in all but a dozen lines takes nearly a volume of court decisions to interpret what those dozen lines of the act really mean.—Oregonian.

School News.

(From special correspondent.)
New pupils continue to enter school.

Miss Nettie Hamlin was a visitor at school Thursday.

Miss Emma Hyde was at school Monday and intends to enter soon.

The pupils of Miss Tufts' room are preparing a program for Thanksgiving.

Extra sessions of school are held occasionally so pupils may make up studies.

Ray Telford visited school Tuesday afternoon. His schoolmates were all glad to see him.

The scholars were all sleepy Tuesday after their Halloween activities and to yawn was quite the fashion.

An interesting spelling match took place in Miss Tufts' room Friday. Miss Margie Scovill had the honor of spelling down the room.

Miss Lemon, a graduate of Portland university and a teacher, has been visiting school paying particular attention to the primary rooms.

The Reading club will meet Wednesday evening at Adelia Hart's home and begin the study of Hawthorne's Wayside Tales.

Prof. Holmes' room was entertained a short time Tuesday morning by the elocutionist, Miss McBride from Oakland. She showed great ability in her imitation of a bird.

The serenity of things about the school house was not disturbed by any Halloween pranks. The school boys showed discretion and wisdom in having respect for school property and not molesting it.

Oct. 20th, 1898. J. D. HAYES, Supt.

The recent remarkable discovery by Prof. Edmunds of the transmutation of silver into gold (argentaurum) is based upon "Mendeliev's Periodic Law" by means of which the chemist can predict the existence of an element in the periodic series yet undiscovered with the same certainty that an astronomer can predict the position and existence of a planet's satellite, not yet discovered. By means of this Periodic table Mendeliev has been able to predict the existence of two new metals long before they were actually discovered, viz., gallium, and scandium and now Prof. Edmunds has discovered one (argentaurum) of the missing links between silver and gold. What the other element will be when discovered, no one can yet predict.

Pine Needles.

Last Saturday afternoon was pay day at the Pacific pine needle factory for the needles the children picked and delivered during the week. The scene was an attractive one, there being at least 125 children of all sizes on the platform at one time awaiting their turn to be paid off. Mr. and Mrs. Cords have adopted the plan of giving the children a check book which will contain the amounts delivered during the week that each one may keep an account of the amount for which he will expect pay on Saturday. The children may deliver in small quantities each day and have them weighed at 5 o'clock or later. Mr. and Mrs. Cords are very kind to the children and they are very anxious that the little fellows may make a few dimes, otherwise it would be much less trouble to have them delivered by the wagon load. Several tons were weighed and paid for last Saturday and the children went home happy.

Verdict.

In the case of H. W. Shibly and Geo. H. Blinn vs W. J. Story to replevin certain personal mining property, the jury found a verdict in favor of the plaintiffs to the amount of $1487.50 and damages in the sum of $252. The plaintiffs were represented by A. C. Hough of Smith & Hough, and the defendant by Judge Willis of Roseburg.

Not only is the home market for copper very strong, based upon a sound position of supply and demand, but the foreign markets are likely to absorb large quantities of this metal during the next few months. In England the demand for copper and engineering and ship building is said to be almost unprecedented, and the application of electricity to traction is rapidly extending both in Europe and the continent. The latter is far behind America in this respect, and should furnish a wide market for copper during the next few years.

The use of copper in the manufacture of sulphate is growing surprisingly, and so long as there is no other metal which directly competes with copper in its individual field the outlook must be admitted to be exceedingly bright. The shareholders of the copper mining companies apparently think that the future warrants their holding out their securities.—Western Mining World.

A FADHLLI BABY.

One That Was Four Months Old and Had Never Been Washed—A Traveler's Experience.

We went to a village called Ab Shebba, more under the mountains. We were shown about very civilly and taken to the door of a larger and asked if we wished to go in, says the Geographical Journal. We did not know if we were wanted, so made an indefinite answer. There was a difference of opinion, and at last they said: "If you wish to go in, you must be washed first." We were then taken to a room where a woman was washing a baby. The baby was four months old and had never been washed. It was a very dirty and unhealthy creature. We were then shown a room where a woman was washing a baby. The baby was four months old and had never been washed. It was a very dirty and unhealthy creature.

Dearest mother, thou hast left us And we'll meet on earth no more, But Thy promise Lord, in Heaven, We shall meet to part no more. But our hearts are sadly aching, And we pray that strength may come, To help us bear our sorrows And whisper, "Lord, Thy will be done."

Kreutzer to be Retired.

With the first day of the new century the ancient Austrian coin, the kreutzer, drops off the face of circulation after a currency of more than 400 years. It is retired in accordance with the convention established a copper currency of equal value for all parts of the empire. It used to be circulated freely in more as well as south Germany, but for the last quarter of a century has not gone beyond the Austrian frontier.

Suicides Increasing Yearly.

The number of suicides throughout the world is 150,000 yearly and is on the increase. The greatest number happen in June, the fewest in September, and nearly one-half between 6 a. m. and noon.

When you have a sick horse you do not hitch him up to a sulky and take him to the race track for a little little little. You do it for him. You cannot work or recreate a man into good health any more than you can a horse. Recalling that a man who has been living in such a hurry, when he has worked himself out, when he has got so that he does not sleep or eat or rest, and the whole world looks at him and it is time for him to take medicine. Then, when he is braced up a bit, it is time enough for him to take the bicycle.

When a man's nerves have an edge on them, so that the least little disappointment raps on his temper like a file, when his stomach and liver and bowels are deranged, and he is continually gloomy and melancholy, he should take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It makes a man as hungry as a shepherd and seeps into his system and cleanses his blood. It drives all bilious impurities from the system. It fills flesh, nerves, brain cells, sinews and bones with life giving elements of rich, red, pure blood. It makes a man healthy and then a bicycle will make him strong. Medicine dealers sell it, and have nothing "just as good."

"Through your skillful treatment I am once more a well man," writes J. N. Arnold, Esq., of Grand, Logan Co., Neb. "I suffered for years with constipation and torpidity of the liver. I tried the prostate and infusions of the bladder. I took six bottles of Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets' and am permanently cured. You have been the means of saving my life."
