The report comes that the Santo Domingo government has surrendered to the Jimenez revolutionists. But it comes through the representative of the revolutionists in New York, who received it from their representative in Santo Domingo. We are obliged to suspend credence till further information.

The movement for Roosevelt to run of the ticket with McKinley, for vice-president, received a set-back from Teddy himself. No doubt he would make a good vice-president, preside over the senate with becoming dignity, and probably is capable of being an artistic humorist as Hobart himself. But he is too heavy a man to be side tracked in any such manner.

Miles shocked a good many people by declaring that Otis was a good and efficient officer, and had done well with his insufficient force. We had been led to believe differently, but Miles certainly ought to know fully as well as the average citizen. One thing we do know, that people are very liable to carry things to extremes, and it has been quite the proper thing lately to severely criticize every move of Otis. He should be treated with fairness.

The "Tidbits" says that a strike has recently been made at Guellette of an entirely new formation, different from any heretofore seen, and that experts are puzzled. We are glad they are. In hardly any other branch of knowledge has conjecture and guess-work so much taken the place of fact, as in the mining business. There is hardly a theory advanced in regard to the origin and deposit of gold that can not be refuted by practical experience. There is a great deal yet to learn about these things and the sooner men admit that they know very little about it, the sooner they will learn.

The returned Californians have been given a rousing reception by the people of their state as might be sufficient to turn their heads, if they are not reasonably level. The Oregonians can make much more quietly. It was not altogether their fault perhaps, but appreciation is not measured by noise, and they know it. The awful suspicion comes to some minds that these men do not deserve so much noise for returning as they did for going in the first place. Of course their time was out and they had a right to come back, but perhaps Uncle Sam would have appreciated it if they had stayed with him. But those to whom such thoughts come are very cautious about expressing them aloud. It might be unhealthy.

The Dreyfus trial still drags its weary length. Four France, she feels the eyes of the world upon her and she knows what to do. She will hesitate, but she will believe him innocent, and to acquit him after once condemning him would be justice going backward, she thinks, and would be acknowledging a blunder. The question is not "what is right," but "what is politic and expedient." And then, what disgraceful scenes in the court-room. And the behavior of Dreyfus himself—a 14-year-old American girl would show more nerve and self-control and bravery under trial, than the French captain. The progress of the trial has developed one hero, but it is not Dreyfus. It is Labori. Labori shot by an assassin, and it was thought, fatally wounded, affairs looked dark indeed for Dreyfus. When it began to be thought that Labori would recover, the friends of Dreyfus endeavored to have the court adjourned until Labori should be able to attend. This was refused. But Labori, as soon as he can walk, is back at his post. Only a few days after he was supposed to be as good as dead, he is back again in the court-room. Details do not stop him.

Many miners live year in and year out on beans and bacon and dried apples, expecting that they might as well have a garden and as good as their own. They would live better and cheaper have more comfort, enjoy life more, and have more of their dust to use for other purposes than buying "grab." Some do make comfortable homes for themselves, and others are not situated in a place where they can. But a great many of them might make homes for themselves who do not. Of course, it is a question that a miner will settle in some gulch or canyon, far from civilization, expecting to stay there for the rest of his life. But many do, whether they expect it or not, and even if they do not, it is very little trouble to set out a few fruit trees and grape vines, and it takes only a few years to reap the benefit. And if the person who plants them does not expect to stay long enough to derive any benefit from them himself, let him be public spirited enough to do a little work for the good of humanity. That is what he is here for anyway. Some one will live there if he does not. The land in these mountain gulches often looks hopeless, but it is almost always amazingly fertile. The miner generally builds his cabin on some little flat in the bottom of a canyon. Water for irrigation can generally be had with little trouble. It is protected from frosts, and the fruit will be free from pests.

Climate and Crop Report.
The rains have ceased and fair weather has again set in. The rains began on August 9 and ceased during the night of the 20th. Rain did not fall very day, there were intervals of fair weather and bright sunshine, but the temperature was abnormally low. The total rainfall for the month amounts to from 2.22 to 2.48 inches, except over the plateau region, where one inch or less fell. Snow fell during the last week on the mountain of northeastern Oregon, and frosts occurred over the plateau region in the 14th, 15th and 20th; on the latter date frosts occurred on the higher elevations of southwestern Oregon, east of the Coast mountains. The weather which has prevailed during the month was unprecedented.
The season has been late since February. Harvesting of fall sown grain is usually well advanced by August 1, but this year it was not generally commenced before that date; the reason was about one-half the grain was in shock when the rains began. Owing to the fact that usually there is no rain in August, it has not been the practice to put the crop in shock; the result is, the rain thoroughly wet the shocked grain. From the 9th to the 27th there was not sufficient dry weather to permit the shocked grain to dry out, with the result that sprouting set in. The damage done by the rains cannot be truly estimated; the greatest damage occurred in the Willamette valley and in northeastern Unstilla county. The damage will in no case exceed 10 per cent, as only about one-half the fall grain has been cut; the total loss will exceed 1 per cent. The rains have been of benefit to spring sown grain, to hops, corn, potatoes, pasture, clover and gardens, and it is thought that the benefit will fully offset the damage, so that the only loss is in the delayed work. Harvesting and threshing will be resumed by Wednesday.
Hops are in first-class condition; the vines are free from lice, and the berries are free from mold and are large and plentiful. The hop crop is today more promising than it ever was before. Hop picking will commence in the southern counties about September 1 and in the Willamette valley about September 10. The second crop of clover will be nearly as good as the first.
Corn is very promising, and with warmer weather a large crop will mature. Gardens, berries, etc., are in excellent condition.
Melons and apples have been ripening slowly. Peaches and pears are ripening. Prunes drying are about 50 per cent. The rains have been of benefit to spring sown grain, to hops, corn, potatoes, pasture, clover and gardens, and it is thought that the benefit will fully offset the damage, so that the only loss is in the delayed work. Obituary.
Mrs. Arthur Cookin—Mrs. Smith died at her home in Grants Pass, Ore., Aug. 29, 1889, after a brief illness of 36 hours.

She was the third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Smith of New York City, born Sept. 13th, 1861. Her parents, with four sisters and one brother, are all living in their eastern home.

Martha attended the public schools of the city; then took a four years course in the Normal College, and after graduation taught in one of the public schools of the city.

In 1881 the family removed to Elizabeth, N. J. On Dec. 10th 1891, she married Mr. Arthur Cookin, and in the following spring, came with her husband, to Grants Pass, Ore.

Excepting one year's residence in Portland, Ore.—July 72 to '73, this city has been her home, and that an ideal home.

It was during her college life, that she was led to acknowledge her Savior, and united with the Madison Avenue Dutch Reformed Church of New York City.

On removing to Elizabeth, N. J., she united with the Westminster Presbyterian Church there. Here, she was actively engaged in all church work; a teacher in the Home Sunday School; and also in a Mission Sunday School.

She never severed her connection with this church. However, on coming to Grants Pass, she, from the first, and of her own free choice, identified herself with the work and worship of the First Baptist Church here, of which her husband is an active member.

Here she formed abundant scope for her teaching and executive abilities; for some years having a class in the Sunday School; and being also President of the Ladies Aid Society. She filled a large place in the hearts of all who knew her. Loved and esteemed as a true sister in Christ, she will be greatly missed from our band of faithful believers.

The grief-stricken husband and two motherly children have the sincere sympathy of the entire community. The funeral services were held on Monday at the Baptist church, the pastor officiating, assisted by the pastor of the Presbyterian church.

Over half the people of this country could not tell if they were asked whether or not any gold had ever been found on Wolf Creek, until the tremendously rich find of H. T. Slater brought the section into prominence. But if Slater's mine should drop down into the earth and be eliminated entirely, there would still be plenty of mines, lodes and prospects and gold production to place Wolf Creek in the front rank as a mining section, and as a promising field for the prospector, there is no better in the country. John Hannum of Coyote Creek is opening a promising lode in this section. J. W. Coffman gets good prospects in his ledge and has a large body of ore. Then, Compton has a ledge which prospects well. E. B. Handaker has two men at work opening up a nine-foot vein which prospects well in sulphurates. A Mr. Tucker is working a paying ledge with an aqueduct. One person picked up 28 different pieces of quartz at one visit to this mine and free gold could be seen in every one of them.

In this immediate vicinity, but just over a divide, is a group of mines on "Quartz Creek" and "Tennessee gulch." Jess Dewey of Glendale has a mine here and is now developing it.

The placer mines of Wolf Creek are paying well. Mr. Slater has a very rich placer mine and a large amount of good ground. He has a ten or 12-foot bank which pays throughout. The three or four feet next the bedrock is a channel wash, and the rest of it is "slide" dirt which pays well in pocket gold. There is no appreciable difference between the top and bottom of the gold differ, that is, the bottom being smooth channel gold. He has a first-class dump, the gold being very steep. His water-right is very good and gives about six or seven months run in the year. He brings the water in a ditch over a divide, and could get easily a thousand feet pressure if he wanted it. It has taken a good deal of hard work to fit up this mine, but it yields large returns on the investment. Mr. Slater has a No. 1 giant and uses a motor.

Below Slater's on the creek is the property of Dave Leman, who has some excellent ground. Clark Mackintosh presides over the Hale-in-the-ground property, below Leman's mine. This is also a good property. Leman and Mackintosh both operate with giants. Below Hale-in-the-ground is the mine of Jeff Wallace which is paying well.

But the place that produces gold in copious quantities is Mr. Slater's quartz ledge. This is a vein of decomposed quartz and porphyry from eight inches to a foot in width, running through a large porphyry dyke. This yields from $150 to the pan according to its varying richness. It is what is known as a pocket formation, but seems to be continuous. Mr. Slater has traced the course of the vein for about 800 feet, and everywhere he has prospecting it, it shows almost incredible richness. Side shoots or stringers unite with the main vein in different places and these are also very rich.

Mr. Slater has worked over about 30 feet in length on the vein and has gone down a depth of about 17 feet in the deeper places and no signs of its plugging out. The "pan" runs in bunches and rich spots, the best pan he has taken out going over $100. In fact, I feel a good deal of backwardness in stating these facts, they sound so tremendously large, but they are undeniably true.

Mr. Slater goes out to pick wild raspberries and brings back, along with the berries, $10 or $20 or $30 worth of dirt in a sack. I know this is true for I saw it with my own eyes. When I visited Mr. Slater, I did not see him at his home, so I sat down and waited at a short time, so when I saw him coming with a sack of dirt on his shoulder and a pair of raspberries in his hand, I asked him if he had been prospecting, and he said no, he had been picking some berries and had just brought a little dirt with him to pan it. It was nearly all porphyry with very little quartz in it. He remarked before he began that he had got it out of a side seam and did not think it was very good. The result was somewhere between $10 and $15. The gold ranged from the size of an ordinary thumb nail to dust as fine as flour. But that was not all of it. He panned into a
