THURSDAY, JULY, 5 1900.

Rear Admiral John W. Philip, who gained lasting fame as commander of the battle ship Texas at Santiago, died at the Brooklyn navy yard Saturday afternoon. An organic affection of the heart was the cause of his death.

John G. Woolley of Chicago, who visited this place last May and spoke in the interests of prohibition in the late campaign, was nominated for president at the national prohibition convention at Chicago, last Thursday. H. B. Metcalf of Rhode Island was nominated for vice-president.

The battleship Oregon, the pride of the navy, ran into a rock in a fog a few days ago on the way to Hong Kong, and is now aground. Three other naval vessels have been sent to her assistance. There is a hole in her side and some dispatches seem to cast a doubt on the probability of getting her afloat again. In the official cablegram from Admiral Kempff, however, there seems little cause for alarm. He says: "Oregon has run aground. It is not in a dangerous position. Have sent to her assistance three naval vessels. It is reported that there is water in one comrartment. The commander of the Oregon did not request assistance, a Japanese man-of-war having boarded the vessel." If the Oregon should be sent to the bottom by a 13-inch shell, our grief would be tinged with exultation in her gallantry and the poignancy thereby considerably assuaged. But to have the grand old Oregon punctured by a rock and sunk like a tin can is altogether too inglorious a fate and we sincerely hope she will be floated and yet carry out her portion of the program in the prospective war.

Utter unreliability is a feature of most of the news from China. In regard to the situation in the interior, there is no reliable information. We are told one day that the foreign legations in Pekin are all safe, the next that they are all dead. The real situation is doubtless somewhere between these two extremes, and in time we will know whose guess is correct, but we are denied that knowledge now. There seems to be a lack of vigorous effort on the part of the powers. They do not yet know wheth er or not a state of war exists, even when battles are being fought almost daily. Those who would act quickly and determinedly are watched suspiciously by the others and the estimated value of a few square miles of territory seems to predominate over that of a like number of human lives. The proposition, however, of a war with China is one of an immensity which almost staggers comprehension. The Chinese are no fighters. An ordinary European or American army could cut its way through the empire and back again, but only the smallest results would be accomplished. Beyond the killing of a few thousand Chinese, which would be only an advantage to the millions who remain, the results would be inconspicuous. The vastness of China's population is something that we are hardly able to comprehend and the correct manipulation of the present crisis is a problem to the statesmen.

Glorious Fourth of July.

In all the history of Independence days, the weather never laid its plans more systematically or carried them out more successfully for the production of one of the most perfect summer days ever known in the annals of the realm. From the first peep of light over the eastern hills to the beautiful moonlit evening and the deeper shades of the later night, the weather did its part. Grants Pass weather is patriotic and lent the whole weight of its influence that the occasion might be an unbounded success. The day was only just warm enough so that we were sure that it was the summer season. There was little of the oppressive heat of the traditional Fourth, but the air had a bright, cheery, exhilarating quality which made life an ecstasy and rendered possible the keenest enjoyment of the celebration festivities. Gentle cooling breezes from the western seas tempered the sun's fervency and the air had a clarity in unison with the bright occasion.

The weather was far from being alone in its efforts to secure an enjoyable celebration. The committee had prepared the program well and had presented many attractions and amusements for the entertainment of the throng.

Throughout the week or more preceding the Day, preparations had been under way. A platform 50x100 feet had been erected between the bank and the depot for the evening grand free ball, the grounds had received the care necessary for their suitable appearence and streets were put in more presentable condition for the parade. The streets were gaily decorated and the sidewalks of the business streets were fringed with solid columns of evergreens. Some, walking on Main street at night, were in doubt we are told, as to whether they were in a wilderness or in New York City, so close was the conjunction of metropolis and forest.

Promptly to the hour the sunrise salute pealed forth the announcement of the day's arrival and simultaneously with its crash, hundreds of small feet throughout the town met various floors, for it was Fourth of July.

The people had begun to gather for the celebration several days before hand and on the day itself, they poured in from all quarters until one would have imagined that all Oregon had come to visit us. From Browntown to Tunnel 9 and from Tin Cup to Last Chance, the whole length and breadth of our county was represented by its attending delegation.

Many from Jackson county were present and helped to swell the grand total of the assemblage. Ashland alone sent a delegation of about 250 people.

The festivities were inaugurated with a grand parade which formed on Sixth street above the court house somewhat after 9 oclock. The two most prominent features of this event were the floats of the various orders and Scott Griffin's band. The first were handsome, elaborate, unique and ingenious productions. The other was like unto nothing that has ever been seen or heard since the world began. An army of boys of various sizes, armed with tin and paper horns of various length and dismalness of tone, gave forth wails, shrieks and other agonizing sounds, productive of emotion in the hearts of the listeners. The band was led by Scott Griffin himself armed with a tin horn five feet long, which mingled its hoarse base with the keener squawk of the small fry. Scott Griffin was leader, captain and chief and his band was certainly one of the features of the day.

The Native Daughters secured the prize for the best float. It was rather a difficult contest to decide, as there were several so nearly equal in merit that the judges position was no sinecure. The other orders who had prepared elaborate and handsome floats were the Foresters, W. R. C., W. C. T. U., D. of H., Rebeccas and Woodmen.

The parade led the way to the grounds where music, speaking, reading declaration of independence and other exercises entertained the assemblage. The speaker delivered an address that was full of good sentiment and thought, dwelling on our past achievements, our present opportunities and our future possibilities. The music by the band was very pleasing and Miss Nell DePeatt achieved the difficult task of making the reading of the declaration of independence interesting.

The clay pigeon shoot was warmly contested by a number of our sportsmen. E. E. Redfield won first prize with a score of 20 out of 25 birds thrown. Messrs Skeel and Gobres tied for second place with 18 birds each.

A free dinner was served at the grounds and ample provision had been made for satisfying the appetites of the hungry throng. After dinner the scene of amusement was transferred to the base ball grounds.

The base ball game was disappointing to the ultra patriotic, as the Ashland nine predominated on the tally sheet by 13 to 6 at the close of the game. Various reasons are advanced for this condition of affairs, but the principal reason seems to have been that our boys did not play well enough to hold the Ashlanders level. The visiting team took a strong lead in the first inning and added to it at intervals throughout the game. The Grants Pass boys made a gallant losing fight, but they lack the practice of baseball necessary to the formation of a thoroughly strong team, as this is their first game of the season. The crowd of interested spectators was enormous, the grand stand was filled to overflowing and the fences and outskirts of the grounds lined with people. It was a clean game throughout and the Ashland boys deserve all credit for their victory as it was well earned by superior playing. The umpire, Mr. Downing of Jacksonville was very accurate in his decisions and gave universal satisfaction.

There were all sorts of amusing contests for boys, both before and after the ball game and ample opportunity was afforded for young America to exhibit his prowess in hurdle, sack and foot racing and kindred amusements. A cowboy pony race occurred on Sixth street immediately after the ball game.

The free dance was one of the grand popular attractions and was numerously patronized. Here the dance attending beauty and chivalry of Southern Oregon swung to enchanting strains of the witching waltz and mingled in the mazes of the festive quadrille. Demaree's popular orchestra caught the spirit of the hour and the music which they discoursed thrilled the company with its joyous cadence until the dancing ceased in the small hours near the dawn, and the Fourth was over.

The whole affair was an unbounded success in every way. The attendance was absolutely colossal and when the whole assemblage congregated in the town proper in the morning and the evening, standing room went to a premium. At the dance, the crowd was so dense that ingress and egress to and from the platform had to be almost fought for by inches.

Nothing happened to mar the pleasure of the day and amid the excitement and confusion inevitable in so large a gathering, there was a surprising scarcity of even trivial accidents. The entertainment was continuous and always interesting and, taken altogether, it was the biggest celebration ever held in the town, which is saying a great deal and the Woodmen of the World are to be congratulated.

Fourth of July, occurs only once a year and perhaps it is well that it does not come oftener. Its celebration is exhilarating but exhausting.

Mining Notes.

The work is steadily progressing at the Oro Fino mine under the direction of W. P. Belding.

C. A. Whale of Portland, who has mining interests at various points in southern Oregon, paid Grants Pass a visit last week.

Geo. S. Green came up from Galice Tuesday to visit and to spend the Fourth in town. Mr. Green and his brother D. L. Green, are the owners of the most promising quartz mines in the Galice district.

Cary W. Thompson of the Victor Jr., has been in San Francisco during the past week. He went to purchase five additional stamps to be installed at the mine. This will be a total of 15 stamps and will make the Victor Jr., the largest quartz mining plant in the county.

A phenomenal deposit of copper ore has lately been discovered at the Ballakala mine near Kennet, Shasta county. A body of ore, estimated by experts to be not less than 3,000,000 tons, has been exposed. The discovery is declared to be the biggest on the continent. The Iron Mountain company have the property under bond.

Mining Stock Exchange.

Following is part of the first weekly market report of Wagy, Henger & Wagy, mining stocks and mining investments, 318 and 319 Chamber of Commerce:

"Portland, June 25.—With this, our first weekly letter on the Portland mining stock market to our many friends and clients who are interested in the development of the wonderful resources of Oregon, we desire to call your attention to the Oregon Mining Stock Exchange, an institution doing business in the auditorium of the Chamber of Commerce building, which is fostered and governed by some of the leading people of this city.

"This exchange was organized for the purpose of interesting foreign, as well as local, capital, in the wonderfully rich mines which are known to exist in the State of Oregon.

"That an institution of the class of the Oregon Mining Exchange meets the approval and sanction of our people is evidenced by the fact that upwards of 200,000 shares of mining stock passed between the brokers during the first business week, and also that many of the stocks listed advanced in price under heavy buying orders, a number of which came from the East."—Oregonian.

Lively Sale of May Queen.

The evening call at the Oregon Mining Stock Exchange Wednesday night resulted in the sale of about 100,000 shares of stock, three new properties, from the three principal mining districts of the state, receiving the lion's share of the trading. The galleries were filled with women, who appeared to take deep interest in the proceedings of the dozen or more brokers, who kept things lively on the floor.

The May Queen, in Josephine county, was the heaviest seller, 29,000 shares of it being disposed of. The other new properties were the Gladstone in Baker county, and the Adams Mountain in the Bohemia district.

Bidding was frequently very lively, and the crowd of men who stood outside the rail, many of them clients of the brokers on the floor were only less interested than the women in the gallery.

Sales have been increasing daily since the exchange was opened, and all the brokers report that business is growing at a very satisfactory rate. The interest of Portland people in Oregon mining properties seems to be thoroughly awakened and the managers of the exchange are confident that it will become one of Portland's most important institutions in the very near future.—Oregonian.

The May Queen is the property of the May Queen Mining Company of Portland, recently incorporated by G. C. Roff, A. A. Cameron and W. C. Pairan. It is situated on Green's creek, a few miles southeast of Grants Pass, and is now being developed. It lies in the same auriferous belt as the Dry Diggings, Oscar creek, Mt. Baldy and Missouri Flat.

When a new star floats into the field of vision of some watchful astronomer, the world honors the discoverer, gives the new star a fitting name, and records the addition to the sum of human knowledge gained by this discovery. Yet of what small profit to humanity at large is this discovery? What will those cold star rays do for the sleepless sufferer who coughs and burns the long night through?

A far greater discovery for the sick is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a remedy which has cured thousands of such sufferers. Obstinate and deep-seated coughs, bronchitis, weak and bleeding lungs and other conditions, which, if neglected, lead to consumption, are permanently cured by "Golden Medical Discovery." It contains no alcohol or other intoxicant, neither opium, cocaine nor other narcotic.

"I had a terrible cough over a year ago and could find nothing to stop it, or even to do me a particle of good," writes J. M. Parr, Esq., of Cameron, Screven Co., Georgia. "I chanced to see an advertisement of yours, and forthwith bought a bottle of your invaluable 'Golden Medical Discovery.' Before I had taken half a bottle I was entirely well."

"Winter before this, my eldest boy (who is now nearly five years old), had a terrible cough; he had it the whole winter and all summer. Physicians did him no good, and nothing my wife and I could do did him any good. After your 'Discovery' had cured me so quickly I wrote my wife to bring him back from the country, she having carried him there to see if the change would do him good. We were living in Savannah, Ga., at the time. She brought him back, and after giving him your great 'Golden Medical Discovery' for a time he entirely recovered."

The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, is sent free, on receipt of stamps, to pay expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the book in paper cover, or 31 stamps for the cloth-bound volume.

AROUND THE WORLD QUICKLY.

Party of American Tourists Who Intend Seeing Many Sights in Sixty-Six Days.

Among the passengers on board the train which left the Grand Central station at 5:30 p. m. on February 21 was a party of tourists who had before them one of those interesting tours which are becoming more popular every year with people anxious to reduce the "around the world" record. The tourists in question, says the New York Tribune, were intent on making the trip quickly, but not to the exclusion of sightseeing, and a tour had been arranged by which they will be enabled to see much in China and Japan, to spend a day at the Paris exposition and a day in London and still make the "trip around the world," as it is known, in 65 days, counting the days of departure and arrival.

The travelers reached Chicago on February 22 and made close connections via St. Paul on the Canadian Pacific railroad for Vancouver, where they arrived in time to embark on the steamer Empress of China. The ship arrived at Yokohama on March 12 and remained there one day and then proceeded, calling at Kobe and Nagasaki, stops being made long enough to allow the passengers to see all the noteworthy parts of the places. The steamer left the last Japanese port on March 16 and arrived at Shanghai on St. Patrick's day. The next stopping place was Hong-Kong, on March 20, where a stop of one day was made. Thence the party went by North German Lloyd steamer to Singapore, which port will be reached on March 26, and Penang the next day. The next stopping place will be Colombo, where, if the programme is carried out successfully, a landing will be made on April 1. Seven days later Aden will be reached, and "on April 11," said one of the party, "we shall be in the Suez canal, which is pretty nearly home."

Port Said will be reached on April 12, and on April 16 the tourists will rest a day at Naples. From there the trip is by way of Rome, Genoa and the Mont Cenis tunnel to Paris, and from there, after as much of the exposition and the city as can be seen in a little more than 24 hours has been "done," the globe trotters will go to London for a day and thence by express train for Southampton, where they hope to embark on the Fuerst Bismarck, which is booked to arrive in New York early on April 27.

"The whole trip," said Cook's agent, "will take from the afternoon of February 21 to the morning of April 27—66 days in all, which, considering the time allowed for rest and sightseeing, is pretty good time for around the world."

War and Dyspepsia.

One of the good effects of war is that it cures the worst forms of dyspepsia. Many officers who are the despair of their medical attendants while spending their time between the club and the barracks, come home from a campaign with a stomach like the ostrich's. This, of course, arises from the exercise, the open-air life, the constant mental employment, and very often the short commons. Another good effect is the rather strange one that war cures nervousness of the ordinary kind, as well as headaches and neuralgia. In fact, if a man has any kind of health at the start, nothing braces him up like an exciting campaign. But, on the other hand, if any of his organs are really weak he runs every chance of leaving his bones in foreign parts.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

PREHISTORIC RUINS.

Remnants of Colorado Cliff Dwellings to Be Preserved.

Women of That State Organize to Look After the Ruins and Study the Life of Former Occupants.

Women of Colorado are going to try and save the prehistoric ruins of the state from the depredations of vandals, and at the same time try to add to the world's stock of knowledge concerning those remarkable people, the cliff dwellers. With these objects in view the Colorado Cliff Dwellings association has been organized. The association has been regularly incorporated under the laws of Colorado, so that it may legally acquire and hold property. It is now the intention of the women to acquire title to the ruins of the cliff dwellers, either by purchase or by a grant from the state, which it is believed will be glad to hand these famous ruins over to the women for care and preservation.

The association, says the Chicago Inter Ocean, is not a hastily formed one. On the contrary, it is the outcome of nearly three years of agitation and education of the women of the state. In October, 1897, Mrs. Mahlon D. Thatcher, then president of the State Federation of Women's clubs, appointed a committee of women who had for years been personally interested in the protection of the state's prehistoric heritage to act with the federation and clubwomen as a special committee for the spreading of knowledge concerning the ruins, the collection and preservation of relics, and the ultimate bringing forward into the light of to-day of the wonderful old ruins which have been so long shadowed by the cliffs in the Rio Mancos canyon. Since its appointment the committee has had visions of work done by it which would present to the world antiquity of far greater interest than any now known in the old world, and with a setting of deep canyons, rugged mountains, and great stretches of blue mesa land—a park containing a museum of unknown antiquity.

The area of prehistoric ruins in the southwest covers a tract of 6,000 square miles, extending from "the four corners" into Colorado, Utah, New Mexico and Arizona. Therefore, the tract of land most valuable for a park has been a grave question at issue with the committee. They have had an accurate and comprehensive map made of the section called Mesa Verde, the green tableland, in the southwestern corner of Colorado. It is their wish to include in the park that portion of the mesa and adjoining canyons which contains the most ruins.

It should be understood that Mesa Verde, the probable location of the future park, is a strikingly singular divide between the Mancos and the Montezuma valleys. Throughout its extent it is gashed and seamed by innumerable deep canyons and ravines. The uplands are crowded with forests of pinon trees in such close array that one finds it difficult to pick a passage through them. Ruins of the houses of the mesa-dwellers are thick upon the plateau.

The canyons, which split the divide into tongues and islands of precipitous rock, are lined with the houses of the cliff dwellers. The sides of the canyons are sheer walls of yellow sandstone, ranging in height from 500 to 1,000 feet. As a rule, the dwellings stand 50 or 100 feet below the rim of the heights, in a sheltered recess overhung by beetling masses of rock. In a great many instances it is impossible to climb to the houses from the bottom of the canyon. Most of them have to be entered from the top of the cliffs. There are no definite roads or trails leading to them, and the difficulties to be overcome and the dangers to be dared in visiting the cliff houses are many. The difficulties and dangers only show how necessary it is to build roads and trails and a rest house, so that people with great enthusiasm but little strength may visit the ruins.

The Cliff palace and the Spruce Tree house are two of the cliff houses included in the tract set aside for the park. The Cliff palace is 450 feet long, 80 feet high, 80 feet broad, and contains 127 rooms on the ground floor, and accommodations for probably 1,000 people. The Spruce Tree house is only a short distance from the Cliff palace, and is one of the most finished specimens of prehistoric architecture yet found. A visit to one or both of these ruins would repay one for almost any amount of fatigue, and the Colorado Cliff Dwellers association intends to be the pathfinder for the delicate enthusiast as well as for the brawny relic hunter.

Georgia's Fruit Industry.

In addition to its other new industries, Georgia is beginning to witness a growth of her fruit industry which must soon attract the attention of fruitgrowers elsewhere. Many of the old farms of that state, particularly in the northern part, which had about driven their owners into bankruptcy, have been made under this new development exceedingly profitable. The old red hills, good for nothing else, have been found to contain just the soil for peaches, apples and pears, while the climate is all that could be desired.—Chicago Chronicle.

Tobacco for the Highlanders.

A meeting of Scotsmen was recently held here to arrange for a present to Scotsmen at the front. It was decided that a box of tobacco and a pipe should be sent to every member of the Highland and other Scottish regiments on active service in South Africa.—Brooklyn Times.

It has cured thousands of hopeless cases, and is positively guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung diseases. 50c and $1. Trial bottles free at Dr. Kremer's drug store.

R. D. Hume of Rogue River, has sent to the Coquille River, several thousand young salmon hatched at his Rogue River hatchery. Report says during the year several thousand young salmon will be turned loose into the Klamath, by Mr. Hume. His efforts in the line of propagating and perpetuating the salmon in the streams of the coast is commendable.—Del Norte Record.

EXECUTOR'S NOTICE.

In the matter of the Estate of Angus B. Hopkins, deceased.

Notice is hereby given to all whom it may concern, that the undersigned, James S. Moore, has been duly appointed by the County Court of the State of Oregon for the County of Josephine, Executor of the Last Will and Testament, and of the Estate of said Angus B. Hopkins, late of Josephine County, Oregon, deceased.
